ROOSEVELT'S PLEA BRINGS FOUR-POWER PEACE PARLEY

REPORT DAVEY BREAKS WORD ON SCHOOL AID

Capital Hears Governor Tells Aid No Special Assembly Session Will Be Called.

BACKS UP ON PROMISE

$17,000,000 Debt Reduction Pleas to Go Unheeded, Says Columbus Informant.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS—A representative of Governor Martin L. Davey has informed a high state official that there will be no special session of the Ohio general assembly this year to consider public school financing, the United Press learned today.

The governor's aide was quoted by an unimpeachable source as saying that no special session would be called because it would be "political inexpedient."

Promised Session.

Gov. Davey had stated several months ago that a special legislatives session to consider ways of reducing the state's $17,000,000 school debt would be called after the November election. Officials of the state department of education and the Ohio education association have been urging in recent weeks that such a session be called.

E. N. Dietrich, state education director and a Davey appointee, has tried unsuccessfully on three or four recent occasions to discuss the school problem with the governor, it was understood.

School officials have been particularly anxious to have the cigaret and liquid fuel taxes re-enacted by the legislature. These taxes partly support the state school foundation program and will expire next March.

Security Menaced.

School men fear that unless these taxes are re-enacted, the banks might consider school notes as having insufficient security.

Re-enactment of the cigaret and liquid fuel taxes before the regular session of the legislature next January is desired by school authorities, some of whom believe that school financing measures might be delayed in the regular session and that there might be a conflict between relief and school interests.

Ashbrook Pledges Opposition to U. S. In a Foreign War

Taking a firm stand against the United States going to war, Congressman William A. Ashbrook, Johnstown, representative for the 17th district, told the Coshocton Rotary club yesterday that he never again would vote for a declaration of war unless this country is invaded.

Ashbrook, who is a candidate for re-election to congress on the Democratic ticket, discussed the European crisis, asserting that "I am less hopeful of the outcome now that ever before, but I am one member of congress who intends to profit by the mistake of 1917."

"Against my personal convictions, I voted for the declaration of war at that time, but I will never do that again unless the United States is actually invaded," he said.

Elected first in 1906, Ashbrook has served nine terms in congress as representative of the 17th district which includes Richland county. In the November election he will oppose Walter B. Woodward, Bellville, the Republican candidate.

GETS NEW POST

McAdoo Becomes Board Chairman Of Dollar Line.

WASHINGTON —(AP)—Senator McAdoo (D-Calif.) defeated for renomination, will become chairman of the Dollar Steamship lines' board of directors.

Selection of the 75-year-old California was announced yesterday by Chairman Emory S. Land of the maritime commission which controls 90 per cent of the company's stock under a subsidy agreement.

Cabinet Studies Crisis---The Probable Line-Ups In Case of War

President Roosevelt and his cabinet met in the White House (top) to give serious study to possible United States action in case war should break out in Europe. 'SHAKE FEAR—STEP FORWARD'

That's Walker's Plea as He Launches C. of C. Series; Calls for Leadership.

"The United States isn't broke—the curse is there is too much money, 13 billion dollars in reserve gold, gold that belongs to American people that they can use in the channels of trade.

"Then what are we afraid of? Have we faith in ourselves? Perhaps the thought that we haven't is fear. Let's shake loose the manacles of fear and fallacies—and step forward. Let's emulate the pioneers of this country who had faith and weren't afraid!"

These are excerpts from the address of DeLoss Walker, associate editor of Liberty magazine, who spoke to more than 200 Mansfield businessmen last night at the Mansfield-Leland hotel, at the first of a series of monthly membership meetings of the Chamber of Commerce.

His address was replete with optimism, with advice to shake off the fears of depression and was interspersed with stories which he emphasized with gusto

MARKET SPURTS

4-Power Parley at Munich Brings Sharp Upswing.

NEW YORK—Wall Street today greeted news of the Munich conference of leading European government heads with a rousing up-swing in the stock exchange, one of the sharpest of recent years.

Stocks had slumped $1 to $3 a share in the first few minutes of trading, in response to extreme nervousness of European markets, but buyers swarmed into the market at the end of the first half hour, as financial news tickers printed the announcement that Prime Minister Chamberlain, Premier Daladier and Premier Mussolini would meet Reichsfuehrer Hitler in Munich tomorrow in a fresh effort to avert war.

Losses were quickly recovered. Many stocks jumped to $1 to $4 above yesterday's final prices.

League Gives Roosevelt Credit

GENEVA — (INS) — The initiative of President Roosevelt in appealing for European peace was credited by League of Nations circle today for tomorrow's four-power conference in Munich. League spokesmen were extremely enthusiastic over the outlook.

PARIS—(UP)—Premier Edouard Daladier arranged today to fly to the four-power peace conference at Munich and it was understood that further French mobilization would be postponed. French officials credited President Roosevelt's two peace messages with an important part in bringing about the Munich conference at an hour when war seemed certain.

BERLIN—(UP)—Nazi circles indicated belief today that Fuehrer Adolf Hitler would accept a "token withdrawal" of Czech troops from Sudetenland by Saturday at a basis for peaceful settlement of the central European crisis.

Duce Sent Roosevelt Peace Appeal

WASHINGTON—(AP)—White House attaches announced today that President Roosevelt had sent a personal message to Premier Mussolini "in the interest of preserving world peace."

WASHINGTON — (INS) — Chancellor Hitler's proposal for a four power conference at Munich tomorrow was hailed by the White House and state department today as offering "the greatest hope" for averting war in Europe.

LONDON—(INS)—Belief immediately spread in the house of commons lobbies late today that tomorrow's conference at Munich is likely to develop into a general European peace meeting at which all present issues, including the conflict in Spain and the colonial problem, will be discussed if not settled.

WASHINGTON—(UP)—John C. Metcalfe, agent for the house committee investigating un-American activities, testified today that New York German American Bund members are advertising a "celebration of Hitler's conquest of Sudetenland" for Oct. 2.

DOORN, Holland—(INS)—The entourage of former Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany declined today to offer any comment on the European crisis or to approach the ex-kaiser for a statement.

AUTOISTS URGED TO 'STEP ON GAS'

Drivers' License Deadline Two Days Away but 12,000 Still Without 'Em in City.

Unless Mansfield autoists "step on the gas" within the next two days there will be hundreds of drivers who can't legally operate a car after midnight Friday, Frank Beverstock, deputy registrar, warned today.

Of the 19,500 Mansfield drivers who rode behind the wheels of cars in the last year, only 7,400 have applied for 1939 licenses up to this morning, Beverstock said. Last year 12,336 licenses were sold between Sept. 5 and Oct. 1.

The current licenses expire at midnight Sept. 30 and there will be no extension of time, it was indicated today by Frank West, state registrar of motor vehicles. West said today that approximately 800,000 Ohio drivers are still without 1939 licenses, with only two days to go after today.

"The sale is not going as well as we had hoped," West said today in Columbus, "in view of the fact that vehicular registrations reached a new high this year." About 2,650,000 operators' licenses and 200,000 chauffeur licenses were issued last year in Ohio.

ASHLAND'S GRID SQUAD UP TO 19

College Will Fill Schedule, Barring Injuries.

ASHLAND — (AP) — Frank Lonero's Ashland college football squad soared today to 19 men and the coach said Ashland would try to play out its Ohio Conference schedule.

"Three more came out last week and two this week" he said, "but they're not football players. If we don't have any injuries we will try to play out our schedule but if we do have injuries we may have to drop a few games. We haven't decided which.

Lonero said while Ashland had asked Bowling Green to negotiate with Bluffton to fill the scheduled Oct. 8 encounter between Ashland and the Beegees, "we will try to put 11 men on the field" if Bowling Green can't obtain the game.

HITLER CALLS HEADS OF FRANCE, BRITAIN, ITALY TO CONFERENCE

HITLER HEEDS MUSSOLINI'S 'PEACE CALL'

Duce Takes Decisive Step at Behest of Roosevelt and British Premier.

DEVELOPMENTS RAPID

Italy Changes War Rehearsals Into Peace Pressure Within Space of 7 Hours.

By FRANK GERVASI
(INS Staff Correspondent)

ROME — Premier Benito Mussolini, who frequently has threatened democratic ideology with the mailed fist of fascism, today assured himself immortality in world history by acting in concert with the world's greatest democracies to halt the onward sweep toward another European conflict.

Linked with President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, the supreme leader of the Italian empire launched a desperate, last-moment drive which, if successful, may assure world peace for generations to come.

Note Kept Secret.

(Editor's note: A "personal message" from President Roosevelt to Il Duce went forward from Washington to Rome yesterday. Its text still remained undivulged this afternoon, although it was publicly acknowledged to have been sent "in the interests of preserving world peace.")

At the urgent behest of Roosevelt and Chamberlain, the Italian premier took the decisive step which prompted his German ally to call off scheduled mobilization of the reich war machine and, in addition, to invite democracy and totalitarianism to seek peace at the counsel table.

Between 10 and 10:30 a. m. (between 4 and 4:30 a. m. EST) the rugged-jawed dictator placed a personal telephone call to Chancellor Adolf Hitler who, at that very moment, was grimly over-

APPLIANCE DAY!

That Will Be Tomorrow's Fall Display Week Feature.

Fall Display week goes into its fourth day tomorrow when Household Appliance day will be observed. Stores handling all kinds of appliances for the home will have special displays to offer, particularly those handling electrical equipment.

Today was "Dollar Day," one of the highlights of the week. Dollar bargains offered in most of the 44 stores participating in the week's activities, combined with ideal September weather, brought shoppers in large numbers to the downtown district.

The annual fall event closes Saturday night, at which time the misspelled word contest also ends. Friday has been set aside as "Furniture Day" and Saturday is "Apparel Day."

Members of the Marion Hobby club will come to Mansfield tomorrow to judge the hobby displays and award cash prizes and ribbons.

Traffic Death Total to Be 8,500 Under Last Year, Council Says.

CHICAGO—(INS)—The nation's traffic death toll for 1938 will be approximately 8,500 less than in 1937, the National Safety council estimated today. On the basis of figures for the first eight months of the year the number of fatalities throughout the country will not exceed 31,000.

BULLETIN

BERLIN—(AP)—Germany's propaganda minister, Paul Joseph Goebbels, told a throng of Berliners today he foresaw an amicable solution of the German-Czechoslovak dispute "within a few days."

BULLETIN

ROME—(UP)—Premier Benito Mussolini left by train at 6 p. m. for Munich, where he will sit in tomorrow's four-power conference. Foreign Minister Ciano accompanied him. Usually reliable sources reported that Mussolini had ordered immediate withdrawal of Italian volunteers from Spain.

(Compiled From Latest Cables)

Europe halted on the brink of war today—and it seemed apparent that the president of the United States was the man who had halted its frightening march to destruction.

Last night, President Roosevelt sent a second dramatic appeal to Adolf Hitler, appealing to him to continue to seek a solution of the Czech crisis by negotiation rather than force.

Then he sent a "personal message" to Benito Mussolini, premier of Italy, and the man on whom Hitler depended for his strongest support in the event he marched against Czechoslovakia, and automatically arraigned against himself Great Britain, France and Russia.

After he had received the president's message, the text of which was not made public, Mussolini personally telephoned to Hitler.

And within a few short hours came the startling announcement that Hitler had postponed mobilization of his army for the invasion and had invited Mussolini, together with Premier Neville Chamberlain of Great Britain and Premier Edouard Daladier of France to meet with him in Munich tomorrow afternoon to seek a peaceful solution of the Czech crisis.

Meets Wild Acclaim.

The four-power parley was first announced by Chamberlain as he spoke to the house of commons in London today. It created a tremendous enthusiasm and buoyed up hopes of all Europe that war might be averted—and it came at a time when the war clouds were darkest.

Hitler's spectacular move came almost at the hour he had previously set for marching his army into the Sudetenland.

Playing a part almost as important in the day's history-making developments was Chamberlain. He also called on Mussolini to intercede for peace, through the

REPRIEVE: Swift Events Let Sun Shine Through War Clouds

Wheels turned with startling rapidity in Europe today to bring about the welcome postponement of what seemed an inevitable war.

Working in desperation as the war clouds closed in, statesmen arranged tomorrow's Munich meeting at which the heads of four great powers will sit down to talk over the Czechoslovakian crisis and a way to settle it without resorting to arms.

There was considerable belief in European capitals that President Roosevelt's second message sent to Adolf Hitler last night, had been instrumental in arranging the conference.

Dispatches from European capitals show the following events that led up to tomorrow's history-making Munich conference:

1. President Roosevelt last night dispatched a dramatic appeal to Hitler to refrain from war, suggesting a conference of all the nations involved. The president also sent a message to Premier Mussolini urging him to intercede. Other messages urging them to bring pressure upon Hitler for peace were dispatched to Japan, all of Germany's allies and to 63 other nations, by the president.
2. Prime Minister Chamberlain of England asked the Earl of Perth, British ambassador to Italy, to try to persuade Premier Mussolini to use his influence to keep Hitler from invading Czechoslovakia.
3. Lord Perth saw mussolini.
4. Mussolini telephoned personally to Hitler.
5. Rome reports said Hitler had agreed to have Mussolini join in mediation of the problem.
6. Hitler invited Chamberlain, Mussolini and Premier Daladier to meet him in Munich tomorrow to try to reach a solution of the Czech problem without resort to arms.

WASHINGTON: Here's Text of Plea That Stopped War March

WASHINGTON — Here is the text of President Roosevelt's second message to Adolf Hitler, a message that apparently brought a definite move toward peace in war-threatened Europe, after all other means failed.

Soon after a personal message from President Roosevelt had been delivered to Premier Mussolini, the Italian premier telephoned Hitler and insisted that the German chancellor summon a four-power conference.

This Hitler did immediately and at the same time he ordered a delay in the mobilization of troops for his threatened forceful seizure of Sudeten lands in Czechoslovakia.

President Roosevelt's message said:

His Excellency
Adolf Hitler
Chancellor of the German Reich
Berlin (Germany)

I desire to acknowledge your excellency's reply to my telegram of Sept. 26. I was confident that you would coincide in the opinion I expressed regarding the unforeseeable consequences and the incalculable disaster which would result to the entire world from the outbreak of a European war.

The kuestion before the world today, Mr. Chancellor, is not the question of errors of judgment or of injustices committed in the past. It is the question of the fate

City Takes Relief Finance Problem Direct to State

SEEKS OK ON CREDIT PLAN FOR MATCHING

Officials to Confer Tomorrow as Unpaid Food Bills Reach $50,000.

The problem of what to do about financing the city's relief load which has reached serious proportions with unpaid food bills totaling $50,000—will be taken directly to state relief officials in Columbus tomorrow.

City and county officials will confer with O. P. Van Schoik, chief relief examiner in the state auditor's office at 10 a. m. Thursday to discuss a credit plan for matching state funds.

The meeting was arranged with Van Schoik yesterday by County Auditor Norman L. Wolfe after city officials had laid the plan, similar to the one used in Stark county, before him.

Those who will make the trip are Wolfe, City Solicitor Marion D. Ward, City Auditor Paul L. Kelley and Service-Safety Director Earl A. Nist, who went to Canton Monday to study the credit financing angle.

Calls for No Fund Outlay.

The plan suggested by Nist calls for the city and county officials to dig up credits of state money already spent for relief this year. This would be used to match state funds made available by the issuance of notes in the amount of $63,000 against the anticipated collection of state taxes through 1942. There would be no actual outlay of city or county funds.

Nist pointed out, however, that in the event that credits equal to the amount available from the state could be found, the $63,000 which would be forthcoming would be little more than necessary to meet the present indebtedness.

He said the $63,000 could not possibly finance relief for the balance of this year.

County Allots Relief Money.

County commissioners today distributed $7,345 in state sales tax and beer, malt and admission tax receipts to Mansfield and Shelby and 10 townships for relief purposes.

The allocation, all that is available for August relief bills, is less than half the $16,260 needed to pay the relief expenses.

With August debts totaling $11,282, Mansfield received only $4,038. Shelby got $323 to pay bills amounting to $968, while Madison township fared better, getting $1,023 as against bills totaling $1,567.

Other allocations to townships included Bloominggrove, $24; Cass, $51; Jefferson, $50; Mifflin, $38; Monroe, $25; Plymouth, $80; Springfield, $202; Troy, $31, and Worthington, $22.

The August relief figures, submitted to commissioners as a basis for relief fund allocations, showed 3,890 relief cases in the county.

Mrs. Hahn Jittery As Date Nears for Death Plea Ruling

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Anna Marie Hahn has turned to embroidery to relieve her tense nerves as she awaits a ruling of the U. S. supreme court on her appeal from a death sentence.

Prison attendants said today that the convicted poison slayer of aged Jacob Wagner of Cincinnati is growing more nervous as the October term of the supreme court approaches.

The once plump blond has lost weight, too, but whether this was due to worry over her uncertain fate, none would say.

Mrs. Hahn was convicted in 1937 of killing Wagner in what the state contended was a "murder for profit" scheme. The deaths of three other men figured in that scheme, the prosecution alleged.

Counsel for the woman argued that in her trial the state introduced 95 witnesses, "the vast majority of which did not testify to one single fact concerning the Wagner case," but "accused Mrs. Hahn of having poisoned three other men."

Poland, Czechs Hurrying to Drive Bargain

Up and Down THE STREET

Lester D. Perry of Madison township has just about decided to turn his attention to a sport other than hunting. Not that Perry doesn't like to hunt, but it seems that he hasn't any luck. Last year he was one of the first to hie to the fields in search of squirrel, but didn't see anything all day but rabbits. Perry again joined the first army of nimrods Monday but failed to see even one, let alone get a shot at one. The only animal he came across all day was a groundhog.

Hal Forrest, creator of the cartoon "Tailspin Tommy" which is a News-Journal feature, has a warm spot in his heart for Mansfield. Seated beside Mrs. R. B. Gardner, Park avenue west, at an American Legion banquet in Los Angeles during the national convention, he told her that he received more fan mail from Mansfield than any other city its size in the United States. The Gardners returned Monday after a month's motor trip to the coast. They, along with the Walter L. Beckleys of Mansfield, met a number of Hollywood personalities, but the only autograph that Mrs. Gardner brought back with her was that of Douglas Corrigan whom they met at the aviators' banquet.

In addition to knowing his "business" when it comes to extinguishing fires, L. J. Steel, fireman at station No. 4 on Newman street, is now the "champion fire starter" in the Newman district. Steel won the title in a fire by friction contest staged last week by Boy Scout troop No. 4 of which he is scoutmaster, defeating Capt. Frank Stahl, his "boss," Fred Heinecking, Arthur McMullen and Fred Ammeter, members of the troop committee.

Three other Mansfielders who were touring the New England states when the hurricane struck and were caught in it were Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Craig, 348 Harker street, and Miss Helen Craig, Western avenue. After motoring through Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, the party arrived at Bethel, Me., just as the wind started and spent the night at an inn near there. They arrived in Mansfield Sunday night after driving through flood districts, and being held up by fallen trees and landslides. They came home by a northern route, crossing Lake Champlain and through Westport and Rochester, N. Y.

HEADS CLASS

Floyd Hunt Elected by St. Matthew's Group.

Officers for the year were elected at a meeting of the Martin Luther Sunday school class of St. Matthew's Lutheran church last night in the church.

Those elected are Floyd Hunt, president; Mrs. Robert Miller, vice president; Wallace Walters, secretary-treasurer, and Cloyd Pugh, assistant secretary. Hunt succeeds Wallace Walters.

Plans were made for a social and entertainment to be held Oct. 21 at the church. Committees named are, entertainment, Mrs. William Mabee, chairman, Mrs. C. F. Sheriff, Mrs. Earl Adams; pie baking, Mrs. Wallace Walters, chairman, Mrs. Franklin Spence, Mrs. Mary Oblinger, Mrs. Floyd Hunt; tickets, Wallace Walters, chairman, William Mabee and Earl Adams. Proceeds will be used for repairing the church.

The class was divided into four teams for a dart ball tournament scheduled to begin at the next meeting, Oct. 25. The losing teams will entertain the winners with a dinner.

STARTS 'PURGE' OF 'CHISELERS'

Cleveland Launches Drive to Determine Eligibility of 78,000 WPA Workers.

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND—This city's long-planned campaign to rid WPA rolls of "chislers" got under way today.

State, city, county and WPA officials agreed to a re-examination of the eligibility of 78,000 now engaged on WJA projects and of 13,200 on the assignment waiting list.

The conference decided to take $14,800 monthly from state relief funds allotted to Cuyahoga county to finance the re-examination. Frank E. Bubna, city federal relations commissioner, said a force of 169 persons would be required to complete the task.

He estimated that the "purge" would eliminate from WPA rolls between 4,700 and 7,000 persons ineligible for work relief.

Elimination of "chislers," he said, could immediately benefit the city relief rolls. As an example, he cited that there are currently 1,077 men and 1,221 women eligible for WPA who are without jobs and that WPA work for the men alone would save Cleveland $30,000 monthly in direct relief.

Among those who approved the "purge" program were State Relief Director William C. Dixon and State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson.

MRS. ACKERMAN TAKEN BY DEATH

Life-long Resident of New Washington Dies at 64.

NEW WASHINGTON — Mrs. Clark Ackerman, 64, life-long resident of Crawford county, died at her home south of New Washington early today, following a heart attack. She had been ill three years.

Mrs. Ackerman is survived by her husband; a daughter, Mrs. Marvin Leonhart, at home; a son, Eldon, of New Washington, and two sisters, Mrs. Etta Miller of Decatur, Ind., and Mrs. Mary Nye of Auburn township.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Friday at the Methodist church, with Rev. Charles Hager officiating.

Burial will be in Union cemetery, near Sulphur Springs.

WILLARD, KNOX VOTERS PASS 5 BOND ISSUES FOR PWA PROJECTS

Five bond issues to help finance public work projects in this district had been approved today.

By a vote of 689 to 74, Willard voters approved a sewer construction project in a special election yesterday. The total cost involved is $130,000, of which the municipality will issue $72,000 in bonds and PWA will provide $58,000. Ninety per cent of the voters approved the bond issue.

The project calls for a connecting sewer line between the east and west sections, already built, and construction of the major portions of the sewage disposal plant, although a complete plant is not to be undertaken at this time. The main sewer line will go under the B. and O. tracks and yards, a considerable undertaking in itself.

Four bond issues, for projects to be financed in part by PWA funds, won approval in yesterday's special elections in Knox county. Three of these were for school bonds and one for a sewer project.

The school bond issues approved were: Mt. Vernon, $198,000; the Clinton-Liberty district, $24,750; and Fredericktown, $77,000.

The village of Gambier approved a $16,000 bond issue as its share of a sewer project, making a total for Knox county communities of $315,750 in bonds to be issued immediately.

In another of the special elections in the state yesterday, a $220,000 school bond issue at Garfield Heights, near Cleveland, followed the course of the Mansfield school bond issue. It was defeated at the primaries but was approved by a 79 per cent vote when submitted for the second time yesterday.

CLASSES SET UP

Y. W. C. A. to Stage Series of Fall Meetings.

Classes for the first half of the year on the Y. W. C. A. calendar were decided upon yesterday afternoon and evening when Mrs. B. L. Chase, educational chairman, met with members of her committee.

It was decided to conduct two Bible classes weekly, with Miss Elizabeth McBride as instructor. Classes will meet at 2 p. m. and 7:30 p. m. on Tuesdays, starting Oct. 11.

Classes in beginners and advanced bridge will be held each Thursday at 7:30, with E. H. Lockwood, jr., giving instructions. These get under way Oct. 13. The Public Affairs class will meet only once each month for a discussion, with Mrs. Wallace Campbell as leader.

Instructions in Consumers Buying will be given on Wednesday mornings at 9:30, and these classes open Wednesday, Oct. 12.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Warsaw Replies to Prague on Offer to Cede Territory With 82,000 Czech-Poles.

(By United Press)

WARSAW, Poland—Poland was driving a hurried bargain with Czechoslovakia today in their prolonged territorial dispute. It appeared that a solution might be reached that would eliminate Poland as a potential ally of Germany in any war over Czechoslovak minorities.

A messenger flew to Prague bearing a letter from President Ignacy Moscicki replying to Czechoslovakia's offer to cede to Poland a 20-mile strip of Silesia inhabited by 82,000 Czechoslovak-Poles. Dr. Casimir Pagee, Polish minister, handed the note to President Eduard Benes at Prague this morning. Its contents were secret.

The Silesian Poles constituted the smallest of the minority races in Czechoslovakia, of which the 3,500,000 Sudeten Germans were the largest. Nevertheless, Poland's demand for custody of this minority had placed it potentially alongside Germany and Hungary in claims against this war-born republic imperiling the peace of Europe.

Agrees to Demand.

An official communique said that President Benes of Czechoslovakia had notified President Moscicki that he agreed with Poland's demands for territorial revision. The Polish government quickly drew up its terms, which were said to be cession of Teschen, a town straddling the frontier, and revision of the boundary line by a mixed commission, but without a plebiscite to determine the peoples' wishes.

This offer, together with a Polish note to the Czechoslovak government, reported to be a friendly one, were carried to Prague by the courier.

Previously, the Czechoslovak military attaches here had apologized to the chief of the Polish general staff for reported violations of the border by Czechoslovak planes, and had announced that a thorough investigation would be made. The foreign office here had protested that on Sunday and Monday Czechoslovak planes had penetrated more than nine miles into Poland, apparently reconnoitering

FAIR ENOUGH!

Someone Should Squelch Radiomen Who Dish Out Trivial News as 'Flashes'

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—I find among newspapermen and particular press association men a sense of resentment against the misuse of the word "Flash!" by radio commentators, advertising copy writers and the journalistic ignoranti who have never covered a story or filed a wire.

My friend Mr. Al Green, the night chief operator of the United Press, says this is almost sacrilegious to him. That is a strong word, but I get his feeling and share it. A flash is just what the word itself suggests. It seldom contains more than half a dozen words and is used to announce some happening of vast importance. It is followed by a terse statement of the news, called a bulletin.

Flash is the highest rating in news value. Bulletins come next. Then come stories in the natural order of their importance. On a news wire, a story must always give way for a bulletin. Any point along the system may break in on any story or bulletin at any time to send a flash, such as "Flash! Chicago. Earthquake."

* * *

There is no such thing as an "Add flash!" and any bureau manager along a press association system who had the gall to break in with a flash as cheap as some of the announcements which nowadays are handled as flashes on radio programs would be set back on his heels.

* * *

Young bureau managers have made honest mistakes of this kind. In the early days of the World war a cub in the Pittsburgh bureau of the United Press broke into a heavy run of news one day with "Flash! Pittsburgh. Naval battle reported off New Jersey." Mr. Fred Ferguson, who was in the slot at the time, killed the flash, but the youth who sent it unfortunately was too far away.

The flash is a newspaper and press association signal to get ready for a story which will dominate page one. Flashes themselves, being quickly followed by bulletins and, as soon as possible, by a more comprehensive and coherent, though possibly brief, type of story called a "lead" are not intended to be cast in type at all. There is a dramatic spirit in the word, and it is rarely cheapened in the newspaper business.

Some bureaus do not have a flash in the course of a year, for a bulletin may not be of such importance as to justify the use of a preliminary flash.

* * *

The old method required the telegraph operator to yelp "Flash!" but the mechanization of the telegraph business abolished this dramatic note, and flashes are now signaled by alarm bells on the mechanical telegraph printers. But cheap divorces and routine births, marriages and deaths are not flash matter.

Some papers are more nimble than others in hitting the street with world-shaking stories after the warning flash. In Dallas in 1915, the Journal was entitled to a margin of 15 minutes over the rival Dispatch on flash matter received by the United Press.

The Journal, a rich and luxurious paper, with more machinery than Bethlehem Steel and more red tape than a bankruptcy, was paying the entire cost of a long wire from Kansas City to Dallas. The Dispatch, also rich but very frugal, was operated almost singlehanded by an underpaid but tumultuous youth named Ross Murphy, who got along with a hatful of type, one telephone and a typewriter that could have been used to crush rock.

* * *

Mr. Murphy received a flash on the sinking of the British cruiser Hampshire and the death of Lord Kitchener 15 minutes later than the Dallas Journal but was selling his extras in front of the Journal office while the Journal's libel lawyer was still trying to persuade himself that the British empire and Kitchener's estate would have no case under the horrible Texas libel law if the news were printed even if true.

The Texas libel law is the most menacing law of its kind in all the world.

It is an old saying in the newspaper business that you can't libel wrestlers or the common cold, but it isn't altogether safe in Texas to conduct a swat-the-fly campaign.

Enmeshed in his own mechanism, the Dallas Journal was beaten to the street from a 15-minute head start to the great pride of Mr. Murphy, who collapsed one day, however, and upon regaining consciousness remembered that he had not had anything to eat for three years and eight months.

So he resigned from the Dallas Dispatch and went to Hollywood, where, last winter, he weighed 186 pounds and wore rich raiment. He eats every day now and thinks nothing of it.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—I've never met Ray Giles but I'm sure he has something in that new volume of his on "Sleep." It includes, among other chapters, essays on the sleep-wooing practices of many movie people. But when I meet Ray Giles, I want to ask him a question, to wit:

"Have you ever heard, Mr. Giles, of my insomnia cure?"

"No," he will say, because until now nobody has heard of it.

"Well, here it is," I will say. "I lie abed, and sleep is a teaser, heartless and elusive. I say, Ha, so it's that way, it it? And then I turn memory loose. I think back to occasions beyond number on which those Siamese twins of filmland oratory—Mr. Louis B. Mayer and Mr. Will H. Hays—have cast a hypnotic spell over whole assemblies, large, small and medium colossal. Once again, relaxed and helpless, I let the torrents of oratory flow over me Word follows word in endless flood, each word a sheep, each sheep a yawn. Sheep and words hurdle fences, and I never need to count them. In five minutes, I am paralyzed, blotto."

Once or twice before this space has contained gentle hints regarding the Mayer-Hays speeches Plainly too gentle. Their best friends won't tell them, so I will—as an humble contribution to the gaiety of future gatherings:

* * *

YOU, Mr. Mayer, are an excellent speaker. Often I have admired your sincerity, frequently your choice of words, always your position as a very smart hombre when it comes to making movies. You are betrayed, I think, by your sentiments. Emotion gets the better of you. Once you have pulled out the tremolo stop, we are goners—and so are you. Maybe you can't trick the tides, but you can certainly sneeze at time. Please, please, next time, stick to the prepared text—and give only a third of that.

And you, Mr. Hays, you gave a perfect speech the other day. You said you would merely add a few words (as you had said so often before) to those of your good-friend-Mr.-Mayer. For one golden moment, after those first few words, we thought you were going to sit down!

Did you? Ah, no, you went ahead and in so doing you spoiled perfection. Before even you realized it, you had launched into your SPEECH. Habit, no doubt.

A few minutes more, and you were oratorical, with gestures. You drove home Points—which no one had disputed in the first place. You said, in effect, that motion pictures are a fine thing and Hollywood, by cracky, would keep on seeing that motion pictures are a fine thing. But you said it powerfully long, sir, powerfully long.

* * *

IN FACT, sir—and I realize this is lese majeste for sure—between you and your-good-friend-Mr.-Mayer many of us were lulled into such a coma that we almost forgot what the meetin' was about. I think even the guest of honor forgot!

And there's no need for it, really, is there? If you think there is, look into your Bible—before the next session, please!—and see how few words Creation took.

Which certainly does remind ME. Quick! Period!

It's a good idea to keep a small bottle of glycerine in your bathhouse locker or on the cabana shelf. Use a clean cloth dipped in glycerine to wipe your sun glasses and keep them clear . . . rub a drop or two on incipient hand callouses from too much beach ball . . . for an emergency mouthwash, mix equal parts of glycerine and water. It's soothing and effective.

New Fashions For Young Woman, Little Girl To Fore

The lumberjack inspired this one. It's a copy of his jacket made of beige, yellow and brown machine-knit wool finished with a brown ribbed waistband. A printed kerchief in the same colors is tied at the throat. The gored brown skirt is machine-knit too.

Add fashion notes—a bolero frock of cotton shantung broadcloth striped in blue and white with a blue dot. The bolero comes off, revealing a little white-collared brown bodice attached to the pleated skirt. The fabric of the dress has been shrunk to standard.

MEN LOVE GIRLS WITH PEP

If you are peppy and full of fun, men will invite you to dances and parties.

BUT if you are cross, listless and tired, men won't be interested. Men don't like "quiet" girls. When they go to parties they want girls along who are full of pep.

So in case you need a good general system tonic, remember for 3 generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling thru" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps build up more physical resistance and thus aids in giving you more pep and lessens distress from female functional disorders.

You'll find Pinkham's Compound WELL WORTH TRYING!

Men Protest Use of Too Much Make-up

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Stop, look and listen, you maids, wives and widows, to these extracts from two letters in the morning's mail. One from Boston and one from California, each prayerfully beseeching that women will be a little more kind to their faces in the matter of make-up.

"Is there a society for the prevention of cruelty to faces? If not, there should be," writes a young man from California who continues with a strain of bitterness: "It looks to me as if girls were trying to be cartoonists and, instead of going to an art school and learning how, they are practicing the art of caricature on their own faces.

Here's a clipping, too, sent by an irate husband, cheering the Solomon-like wisdom of Magistrate Jeannette Brill, sitting in Bridge Plaza Court, Brooklyn, who sent a woman, appearing before her, home to wash her face.

Said the lady judge: "When rouge, lipstick and eye-shade are used without skill, they make a woman look cheap—they make her look like a painted clown."

The husband continues: "The effect some women achieve in the way of makeup leads one to believe they mistake themselves for photographs and take to a darkroom for development. Evidently there's no light when they get busy with the makeup. What's back of this technique? Is it to attract attention at any cost?

"If they can't be pretty, do they wish to be so downright challenging as to be the observed of all observers? This can't be their motivation because some of them, including my wife, are really pretty when they're washed. They qualify for the ugly-duckling class only after they've done their dreadful worst. I don't object to makeup when it's applied artistically but the trowel technique disgusts me."

Whether you make or mar your face, my dear ladies, you've at least one thing to be thankful for these days: the Pure Food and Drug Act has removed the active poisoning from cosmetics. The department of agriculture gave an exhibition of poisonous cosmetics a year or two ago, showing "before and after" pictures of the frightful effects of some of these beautifiers.

Today, thanks to good old Uncle Sam, it's no longer possible to put death-dealing cosmetics on the market. Beautifiers are analyzed by expert chemists, and there are penalties for the use of poisons.

HOROSCOPE

For Thursday, Sept. 29.

Judging by the lunar aspects, this may be a day of major events, although they may be conflicting. On one hand there are staunch and sturdy ability and application, leading to a vanquishing of obstacles, a forging ahead to solid places by tenacity and perseverance. On the other there is a tendency to act on impulse, aggressively and not at all amiably. This may cause enmity, jealousy and defeat, and "upset the apple cart" after much fine diligence and hard work.

Those whose birthday it is are confronted by a year in which the issues are dependent on wise and controlled conduct. There may be an earnestness and determination to make sound achievements by diligence and hard work and, at the same time, there may be tempestuous urges which may incite vindictive reprisals, enmity or strife. This may lead to the loss of a promised fine friendship or assistance of an influential person. Suppress rash and overstrenuous acts and behavior.

A child born on this day may have a difficult nature with excellent talents and sound abilities, as well as good judgment, but it may be reckless, nervous and impatient. This may cause hostility and strife, although elders and powerful persons may be its friends and patrons.

Wife Preservers

For eating hot corn on the cob, a mother bought the little corrugated paper cups in which muffins and cup cakes are baked and put one over each end of the hot cob. The cups kept the hot cobs from burning little fingers, and made them easier to hold and kept said fingers clean.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

"Thank you so much, Dicky," I murmured. "I'll go and tell Noel at once. He thought he was to go up with me tomorrow. He will be so glad to get there sooner."

"Just a second!" my husband said sharply. "Did you hear the warning I gave you, or did your joy and amazement at having me say 'yes' to anything without kicking first make you deaf?"

"Of course I heard you, Dicky," I said, "and I realize the difficulties in my way as well as you do. But Lillian and I have evolved a plan which I think will work out all right. If you have time, I'll tell it to you before I talk to Katherine and Lillian. I haven't told Noel about it yet, and I'd like your advice first."

"Gramercy for the greens, Sweetness," he said. "And, of course, all the contents of my massive brain shall be spilled at your feet, if I can serve you, which I doubt. When you and Lil get through with a plan there's little, if anything, to be added to it, or yet subtracted from it."

"In the first place," I said, repeating what I already had told Noel, "I have asked Noel to register at the —— hotel, a hostelry which is within 10 blocks of the Lansfield, but which I knew had entrances on two streets. He will register for himself and wife and get a room for me on the same floor. That is all he knows as yet."

"Under what names?" Dicky asked crisply, and I felt suddenly abashed.

"I hadn't thought of anything except our own names," I said feebly.

"And, of course, the first thing Philip Veritzen will do when he finds you and Mary are gone from the hotel, something which he will know at once — he evidently has that hotel staff sewed up; he ought to, he owns it—will be to search the registers of every hotel in the city."

"I see," I said humbly. "What names would you suggest?"

"I have it—'Mr. and Mrs. James Alden Choate, II. of Boston, and 'Mrs. Henry Clinton Livingstone, of Albany.' Do those sound authentic?"

"Also aristocratic," I told him, laughing.

"Well! if you don't get a jag on before you register, you can look the part," he said with a teasing grin, and I saw that my decision to accompany him to the city had lifted his spirits immeasurably.

"I have no reply to make to a speech like that," I told him with mock severity.

"There isn't any," he retorted. "But go on—spill the rest of your plan."

"I haven't worked it all out," I said diffidently, "but I thought I would have Noel register for us, and I would go out to some booth outside the hotel and check up with him, so that he would know when to expect us, and that we would know everything was arranged as we had planned."

"So far, so good," Dicky commented. "That listens all right to me. What about luggage?"

"Noel will have his with him, and Mary and I will each take one of those small overnight bags—"

"Which a hotel clerk might recognize as the modern woman's luggage," Dicky said, "but which the average flat foot would think was an oversize purse. All right, that's okay. But how are you and Mary going to get out of the hotel without old P. V.'s being notified?"

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

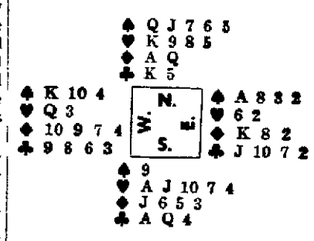
"The Authority on Authorities"

CREDIT—NOT BLAME

MAKING a slam when only game has been bid does not necessarily imply that the pair should be blamed for not bidding the slam. Possibly credit should be extended to the declarer for making the extra trick or tricks or maybe luck may have been the deciding factor, either in fortunate distribution of the defenders' cards or in the particular defense they chose.



(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable).

When South opened the bidding on this deal with 1-Heart, North, figuring there might be a slam in the hands, showed 1-Spade. After a 2-Heart bid by South, North went to 4-Hearts, but South did not feel he could venture further.

West selected the diamond 4 as his original lead. Declarer refused the finesse as one of his high clubs would take care of the diamond Q. He therefore won the first trick with the diamond A and cashed his three clubs, tossing the diamond Q. Then the spade 9 was led and West, reading it for a singleton and East for four, went in with the K. He had no better return at that point, but another diamond, which South ruffed. This was followed by a spade ruff in the South and a diamond in the North.

Declarer then tried out trumps and played for the drop, capturing the Q. When the diamond J was cashed, declarer had made the slam, although he felt he was not entitled to bid it.

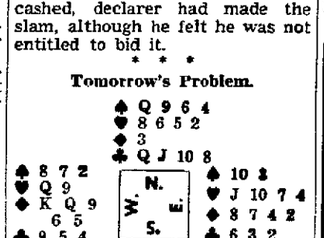
Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: South. North-South vulnerable).

What is the correct bidding on this deal?

THEATER

HOLLYWOOD went out of its way to entertain visiting firemen during the American Legion convention week, and among the bigger parties was that of Warner Brothers when they played hosts on a big scale. The Warner boys, it will be recalled are natives of Ohio. Joan Blondell, Dick Powell, Olivia deHavilland, Paul Muni, Marie Wilson, Pat O'Brien, and Allen Jenkins made the hundreds of guests welcome. Practically all of the top ranking stars of the film city turned out to greet the convention visitors.

* * *

Magazine Story.

Jimmie Fidler, the caustic-tongued Hollywood commentator on stars and their eccentricities, plays a major role in "Garden of the Moon," romantic musical picture which features Pat O'Brien, lovely Margaret Lindsay and an engaging newcomer, John Payne. The story is a free adaption of the Saturday Evening Post story of the same name, with considerable license taken for the sake of comedy. Joe Ventui and his Swing Cats are among the special entertainers.

* * *

Joe Does a Trilby.

Joe Penner does a Trilby in his new picture, "I'm From the City," which opens at the Madison tomorrow. He's a boy who is terribly afraid of horses, but who becomes a sensational circus rider while under the influence of a hypnotist, Ollie. The fun starts when Joe is entered in a cross-country obstacle race—on horseback— and has to ride without being hypnotized. Richard Lane, Lorraine Kreuger and Paul Guilfoyle are in the cast.

* * *

Murder Mystery.

A murder mystery which involves newspapermen, a feminine employe of a collection agency, gangsters and the telephone company's time telling system, are all wrapped up in a package of entertainment called "Time Out for Murder," which the Majestic presents. Gloria Stuart is the girl in the case and Michael Whalen is the reporter. A reissue of the box office hit of several seasons ago, "Roberta," with Irene Dunne, Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers is the second feature.

* * *

Romance and Thrills.

Thrills are provided in the No. 1 picture at the Park theater for the last half of the week, starting Thrursday. Frankie Darro, Evalyn Knapp and Robert Knapp are featured in "Wanted by Police." The bill switches to romance in "Hitch Hike to Heaven," with Russell Gleason, Polly Ann Young and two stars of former years, Anita Page and Herbert Rawlinson.

Notes From a Model's Diary

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

DID YOU ever see such rich clothes and accessories as we are showing this season? As soon as I say those silver foxes with jeweled muzzles, shown by one of the designers at the Paris collections, I knew what we were in for. And as soon as I looked around the shop I saw that I was right. I've never seen such magnificent furs and fabrics.

Our custom-made department has been doing a rushing business with magnificent afternoon frocks of lame, each with its own long matching coat—a luxury mode if I ever saw one. And the new accessories are just as rich. We brought back some of those silver foxes, their muzzles set with fine paste and synthetic stones, and they just "walked" out of the shop.

Very Busy Days.

We are so busy that I haven't a moment to attend to my own affairs. I want to do some shopping, but I haven't a chance Since I am back, I've been having my lunch sent it, and have to snatch a gulp or bite when I get the chance. It seems as though all my special customers came back together and want me to attend to them. Madame has been so nice, and has been out on the floor, which has been a tremendous help, for, of course, every one of our clients would rather have Madame waiting on her than any of the sales force. I have had to do some modeling, too. It has mostly been evening wraps, fur coats and hats, so I must be looking well. As a matter of fact, the girls all told me that they have never seen me look better, so perhaps now that I am looking so well, romance may come my way.

I don't know when I'm going to get time out for any romance the way things are going now. But I guess business will let up a little in a month or so. Then perhaps I'll be able to get a chance to wear my new things and see the town in company with someone very nice.

Both here and in Europe, the red coat seems to be one of fashion's favorites. A deep rich shade of red woolen is used for this smart dress coat which sports a bloused top and a modified bishop's sleeve. The waistline is marked only by a seam. Black fox is twisted and turned on the collar to make a flattering frame for the face. The whole coat is lined with thin black wool which shows in the lapover.

Lovely Red Coat.

My Neighbor Says:

A compost heap is a storehouse of plant nourishment. It is made by collecting all the odds and ends of garden refuse and allowing them to rot. A compost heap is not very ornamental, of course, and a good plan to follow on small places is to use an old molasses barrel. If a hole a foot square is cut in the bottom and the barrel then placed top down over a large, shallow box set well out of sight, perhaps in a thicket of shrubs, all the refuse may be deposited through the hole. The addition of a little good soil will produce exceedingly valuable mold for house plants as well as for distributing over the lawn and using for top dressing in the perennial garden.

To prevent a gas stove from rusting rub the entire inside with a flannel cloth which has been saturated with sweet oil.

Skin Faults Require Treatment

By MME. QUI VIVE

Everything a daughter wants the indulgent mother will give her except an ear to her beauty griefs. Mother is spending plenty of time and money at the beauty shops. But if daughter complains about the state of her complexion, mama will be all too likely to think it is a small grief that will soon pass. A few pimples? What are they? Common to youth.

When pimples continue to appear, medical attention should be sought. The area is treated with lights, antiseptics are used to kill the bacteria that causes them, often a general health examination is necessary.

In every skin that is subject to atmospheric dust germs will thrive. There is no better way to fight them than to wash the face thoroughly every day with water fairly hot and a bland soap. No rough treatment, no coarse towels. Be gentle but thorough. Light friction with the finger tips during the scouring is advisable. For the time being no cosmetics should be used, powder, rouge or cream. Unless a cream is medicated, compounded of healing properties, it is likely to retard the cure of acne. Drying applications are necessary. That is why soap is recommended.

Hot moist applications will bring pimples to a head. Unless they have a well defined yellow point they should not be opened. Then a sterilized needle (hold it in a flame) can be employed, the pus pressed out gently with fingers covered with clean gauze.

Young people are careless about face washing. Their eating habits are seldom right. When the complexion takes on the appearance of a speckled trout, pastries must be deleted from the daily bill of fare. It is wise to cut down on fats.

Drinking six glasses of water a day is helpful. Water assists the kidneys to function, there is less work to be done by the skin, which is an organ of elimination.

YANKEES FIGURE CUBS'LL COME THROUGH IN DIZZY NATIONAL RACE.

By SID FEDER
(Pinch-hitting for Brietz)

NEW YORK—(AP)—The Yankees figure the Cubs'll come through in the dizzy National league race . . . But that may be only what they're hoping . . . Because the box office (and the players' cut) will be lots sweeter in Wrigley field than in Bill Benswanger's ballyard. . . . Things we'd like to see: Jimmy Wilson managing those Dodgers, with a bankroll big enough to cash in on those baseball wits of his . . . of course, he'd have to be really serious about quitting the Phillies first . . . and somehow, letting Jimmy go doesn't sound like the usually smart Prexy Nugent. . . . Well, folks, that 185 G's can't all be written off as loss for the Cubs after the way old Diz came through yesterday . . . and howzabout an assist for Louisiana Bill Lee coming in cold to fan Al Todd in the ninth, after tossing a full nine innings against the Cards the day before.

Jimmy Wilson

It's none other than your old pal Boiling Boily Grimes scouting the Yankees for the Pirates. . . . There'll be no War Admiral-Seabiscuit get-together at Belmont this trip . . . The Biscuit's already been shipped to Delaware . . . The grapevine says Bill Terry has his eyes on Johnny Mize and Phil Cavarretta for the winter trading . . . But you can definitely write off the Joe DiMaggio-for-Hank Greenberg talk . . . All concerned say "no dice" . . . John Henry Lewis will train out near Pittsburgh for his Oct 21 title go with Al Gainer at New Haven . . . Incidentally, the weight bogey man is beginning to get in old Jawn's hair.

* * *

Mickey's Through, Say Reports.

THE LATEST is Mickey Cochrane is through with baseball—but don't bet the house and lot on it, if the Red Sox make that proposition interesting enough. . . . Red Grange, in case you're interested, doesn't worry about the wolf busting in the door these days . . . What with having work as coach of the Chicago Bears, as a writer, sports broadcaster and salesman—wonder what he does with his days off . . . The only crowd not worrying about the Yankees' slump is (you guessed it) the Yanks . . . Don't get excited . . . They'll be there when the chips are down. . . . Out of Princeton comes word the boys will be doing it for Bill Lynch on football fields this fall . . . Fullback Bill died after practice a week ago, and the rest of the squad figuring he'd like it that way, is laboring mightily to put some upsets in the books for him sake

Needs Three For 61

Cubs Register 8th Straight to Reduce Pirates' Lead to Half Game.

By GEORGE KIRKSEY
(United Press Sports Writer)

ALMOST all the baseball world today gave a whoop and a holler for heroic Hank Greenberg and the gallant Chicago Cubs in their quest of laurels everyone believed beyond their reach.

With 58 homers Greenberg needs only three in five games to smash Babe Ruth's record of 60 made in 1927. Even the Bambino himself is pulling for Greenberg "I wish him luck," was the Babe's comment when told of Greenberg's two homers yesterday.

Root for Gabby.

With eight straight victories, the Cubs were within half a game of overhauling the league-leading Pittsburgh Pirates in the sizzling National league race. Almost everywhere except in Pittsburgh baseball fans are rooting for Gabby Hartnett, the popular Irish pilot, to get his Cubs home in front and climax one of the greatest Septembers drives in history. On Sept. 1 the Cubs were in fourth place, seven games from the top.

Dizzy Dean's grand performance turned back the Pirates yesterday, 2 to 1. Dean held the Pirates to seven hits in 8⅔ innings. Hartnett took him out with two out in the ninth because he was tired. The victory had its price as the Cubs lost Outfielder Augie Galan, who twisted his knee in sliding.

With five games left to play, the Cubs still must win one more than the Pirates in their remaining six to grab the pennant.

By hitting two homers yesterday Greenberg moved one game ahead of Ruth's record-breaking pace. Hank hit 57 and 58 in his 148th game. Ruth didn't get his 58th until game No. 149.

Greenberg has two more games at Detroit with the Browns His final three games are against the Indians at Cleveland. Detroit beat St. Louis 5 to 4, and 10 to 2 yesterday.

Splitting a doubleheader with Brooklyn the Giants beat Freddy Fitzsimmons, 5-3, in the opener, but John Gaddy, a rookie from Elmira, and Luke Hamlin combined to give the Dodgers the nightcap, 5-1, in six innings

In the other National league games the Boston Bees beat the Phillies twice, 2-1 and 4-1, and Cincinnati knocked out Paul Dean to trim the Cardinals, 3-1.

Gomez Gets No. 18.

The Yankees defeated Washington 5-2, as Lefty Gomez scored his 18th win. Bob Feller fanned ten to score his 17th victory as Cleveland won from the White Sox, 6-1. Detroit beat the Browns twice, 5-4, and 10-2 The Red Sox slugged out an 11-1 triumph over the Athletics

* * *

YESTERDAY'S HERO — Dizzy Dean, Cubs' $185 000 pitcher with the lame arm, who beat the Pirates in his first start in five weeks.

Six Keep Records Unmarred

Madison High Sports Most Impressive Offensive Mark in Vicinity.

SIX high school football aggregations boast of undefeated records at the conclusion of the second week of play.

Heading the list of undefeated teams are Mansfield Madison and Shelby. The Rams have scored twice as many points as any other team in the immediate district. Their total is 129 points.

Shelby, victorious over Norwalk and Willard, boasts of the only uncrossed goal line in the district, with Galion, Marion and Mt. Vernon each having permitted only one touchdown.

In addition to Madison and Shelby, the undefeated list includes Bellville, Galion, Ashland and Marion. Marion, however, has one tie to mar its record.

Mansfield is one of 10 teams in the district which have lost one game this season.

Four of the seven foes remaining on the Mansfield schedule are unbeaten. They are Canton McKinley, Shelby, Ashland and Sandusky. Hammond, Ind., which plays here Saturday, and Akron Kenmore have each lost one game. The records follow:

24-Team Loop Opens Tonight

Westinghouse Bowlers Pry Off Lid at Meder Lanes.

Mansfield's largest bowling league will open its season at the Meder alleys tonight when 24 teams of the Westinghouse company shove off.

This is the largest number of teams ever to bowl in the Westinghouse league, according to Secretary E. C. Geiger Frank B Williams, new head of the company, will throw the first ball at the opening at 6:30 p. m.

H. C. Little is president of the league and O. A. Redhair, treasurer.

* * *

The Ohio Brass league will get under way Friday night with 18 clubs On the same night, the Tappan Stove and Moose lodge leagues will pry off the lids of their schedules with eight and six teams, respectively.

* * *

The Moose Traveling league, made up of lodge teams of this section of the state, will get under way next Sunday. Two Mansfield teams are represented in the circuit.

* * *

The opening date of the Inter-City Traveling league has not been set, according to Art Hilborn, newly elected president, but it will probably get under way a week from Sunday The Liederkranz club and another team which has not obtained a backer as yet will carry the Mansfield banner in the league.

* * *

Mike Meder of the Meder alleys today urged all bowling teams to make preparations to compete in the $50,000 Red Crown sweepstakes. There is no extra fee or bowling, he explained Regular match scores will be entered in the sweepstakes. The teams will be divided into three classes Entry blanks are now available at the Meder alleys

Shimala Star of Tyger Foe

Hammond Back Rates as One of Indiana's Best.

Hammond, Ind., Clark, Mansfield high's next Saturday foe at Stadium field, has not been scouted, but Coach Russ Murphy has heard enough about the Pioneers to understand that the Tygers have another good-sized job cut out for them.

With a team that includes only an ordinary number of lettermen, the Hammond club has come along fast, according to reports from Hoosierland, and gave its most impressive performance last week when it trounced Kankakee, Ill., 32 to 6.

This is the first intersectional game the Tygers have ever played with an Indiana foe, and it should provide a good comparison of the type of football played in the two states.

Despite the one-sided margin by which the Tygers lost to Massillon, Mansfield stacks up well in Ohio football circles, and Hammond is reported to fare as well in Hoosierland standings.

Clark high will bring one of the state's outstanding backs to Mansfield, Saturday, in Left Halfback Frank Shimala. Shimala has been the Pioneers' chief offensive threat in all of their games. He scored two touchdowns on runs of 40 yards against Kankakee last week.

Seltzer, Hazelwood Lead Cycle League

Seltzer set the scoring pace in the Shelby Cycle league at the Meder alleys last night with a 602 total, which included an opening game of 211. He led the Office team to a pair of wins over the Machinists. Hazelwood compiled a pair of 208's and 170 for a 586 as the Welders won a pair from the Assembly.

STENGEL REAPPOINTED AS BEE HIVE KEEPER

BOSTON—(INS)—President Bob Quinn of the Boston Bees handed Dame Rumor a setback today when after giving Charles Dillon "Casey" Stengel lavish praise as one of baseball's keenest minds, announced his reappointment to lead the Bees in 1939.

PITTSBURGH—Sammy Angott, 132, Washington, Pa., outpointed Leo Rodak 128½, Chicago, (10).

Cubs Win, But Lose Galan

Augie Galan, left fielder for the Chicago Cubs, was carried off the field with a torn ligament, as the Cubs opened their crucial three-game series with the Pittsburgh Pirates yesterday. The club physician, Dr. John F. Davis, said Galan would be out for the rest of the season. Andy Lotshaw, trainer, Bill Lee, and Charley Root, left to right, are shown carrying Galan to the clubhouse. The Cubs won the game, 2 to 1, to climb within a half game of the National league lead.

Slammin' Sammy Sets New Winnings Record

NEW YORK—(INS)—He's tall and lank, 26 years old, virtually inarticulate in the presence of crowds, and a colorless, almost shabby dresser. He's placid as the mountain country whence he hails, but he hits a golf ball farther, perhaps, than any other player in the history of the game, and today he holds the all-time record for money-winnings in a single year.

He's Sam Snead, of White Sulphur Springs W Va., who yesterday made off with the $5,000 top prize of the $13,500 purse in the 108-hole Westchester open tournament at the suburban Fenway golf club. This gave him a total in earnings for the year of $17,572 and topped the previous record of $15,500 established nine years ago by Horton Smith.

His aggregate 430 nosed out Billy Burke, of Cleveland, who led until yesterday, by two strokes, the latter taking $2,000 second money in a magnificent gesture that barely failed.

Paul Runyan, who recently squelched Snead by 8 and 7 in the finals of the national professional championship at Shawnee, Pa., split the third money prize of $1,600 with Byron Nelson, of Reading, Pa., their scores being 434.

Then came Ben Hogan, of New York, with 436 and Chandler Harper, of Portsmouth, Va., with 437, followed by Ralph Guldahl, who wears the national open crown for the second straight time, with other notables and lesser lights still farther back.

Eases Up On Bucks

Schmidt Fears too Much Work Will Make Ohioans Stale for Indiana Game.

By JIM EMERSON

COLUMBUS — (U.P.) — Ohio State football teams have lost only seven games during the four-year coaching regime of Coach Francis Schmidt but three of those defeats were by one-point margins because of failures to score extra points after touchdowns.

With three powerful foes—Indiana, Southern California and Northwestern—appearing first on the 1938 Buck schedule, the wily Dutchman today was not taking any chances of meeting disaster because of lack of preparation in the art of place kicking for extra points.

Maag Shows Promise.

Each day when the Bucks end passing and running drills, Schmidt details a half dozen of the squad's best booters to one end of the field for diligent workouts in kicking.

Last night Charley Maag, Sandusky sophomore giant; Don Scott, Canton terror, and Alex Schoenbaum, mighty tackle from Huntington, W. Va., demonstrated great proficiency in the kicking craft as they hoisted the pigskin over the cross bar with monotonous regularity. Maag, in particular, seems to possess the much-talked of "educated" toe that so often means the difference between a successful and dismal season.

Schmidt's three one-point nightmares since he came to Columbus were Illinois' and Northwestern's 14 to 13 victories in 1934 and 1935 respectively which jolted Ohio State out of Big Ten championships in Schmidt's first two years and the 13 to 12 debacle against Southern California last year.

With the Indiana inaugural in Ohio stadium only four days off, the caustic Buck mentor eased up today on the practice sessions that have proceeded on a two-a-day basis since drills began Sept. 10.

Work In Mornings.

Schmidt ordered outside drills for mornings only from now until Saturday when Bo McMillin's "pore little boys" come to Columbus. The Buck coach feels too much work may bring staleness to his squad. In addition, the gridders must take time off from football duties to register for classroom endeavors which open next Monday at Ohio State.

Ross Bartschy, Orrville, fiery regular left end, will be ready to start against the Hoosiers, Trainer Tucker Smith said. Bartschy received a slight knee sprain in Monday's drills.

BANTAMWEIGHT GRIDDERS HOLD FIRST DRILL TODAY

The first practice season of the Mansfield bantamweight football team will be held at the Tappan field at 5:30 p. m. today. Daily sessions will be held. All boys wishing tryouts are urged to report at the practice field. The team will be sponsored by Mansfield merchants.

Here's One for Ripley: Doyle Kayoes Himself.

LONDON — (U.P.) — Irish Jack Doyle knocked himself out in the second round of a scheduled 12-round fight with Eddie Phillips at Harringway arena last night. Doyle missed a terrific right, lost his equilibrium and plunged through the ropes to the floor. Before he could get back in the ring, the referee counted him out and awarded Phillips a technical knockout.

Feller, Heath Play Leading Roles in Win

Former Hangs Up 17th Win by Beating Chisox, 6-1.

CLEVELAND—(U.P.)—Young Mr. Robert Feller, erstwhile youthful pitching sensation of the Cleveland Indians, could step up and take a bow today for a courageous comeback.

The young speedball artist hung up his 17th victory of the year Tuesday and boosted his strikeout record to 222 for the season as he pitched the Tribe to a 6 to 1 victory over Chicago. Bob leads both major leagues in strikeouts this year.

Feller demonstrated real courage and persistence for a young man yet to reach his 20th birthday when he came back during the past two months after fair-weather fans and critics gave up on him when his effectiveness collapsed in early summer.

Feller has been the most consistent winner on the Indian mound since Aug. 15. Jeff Heath, another young player playing a prominent role in Indian fortunes these days, rifled three hits in Tuesday's triumph including a double and his 19th home run of the season.

Earl Whitehill of the Indians and Thornton Lee of the White Sox were to oppose each other on the mound today.

NEW EUROPEAN PEACE HOPES SPUR MARKET

Spectacular Rally Follows Reports of Plan for Mediation of Czech Dispute.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—A spectacular rally followed an opening decline in the stock market today when peace hopes revived on reports of a plan for mediation of the Czech-Nazi dispute in a four-power conference at Munich tomorrow.

U. S. Steel, down more than a point at the opening at 51, bounded up to around 56 for a net gain of about 4 points. Other stocks similarly snapped back in a violent rebound on hopes the problem which had brought Europe to the brink of war would be settled peacefully.

Bonds and commodities, also hit at the start by the overnight darkening of the European skies, joined in the comeback.

Wide gainers on the recovery included General Motors, Bethlehem Westinghouse, Chrysler, Anaconda, General Electric and Douglas Aircraft.

What effect the European crisis would have upon business in this country occupied the thought of Wall Street analysts.

Some observers professed to find definite indications of a slowing of industrial recovery at home under the shadow of war threats.

LITTLE ORPHAN ANNIE—A Better Man-Trap. By Harold Gray

NOW DON'T BE SQUEAMISH - YOU HATE JACK AS MUCH AS I DO - YOU'LL BE THERE IN THE OFFICE WITH HIM - HE'LL GET IT THROUGH THE WINDOW - ALL I WANT OF YOU IS TO DESCRIBE THE KILLERS TO THE COPS --- SEE?
YEAH - YOU'LL DESCRIBE THEM --- BUT THE WAY THEY AREN'T --- NO ONE CAN DRAG YOU IN - IT'LL JUST BE ONE OF THOSE THINGS - SEE? NOBODY EVER CAUGHT -
YES - BUT WHY BE SO CRUDE ABOUT IT?
CRUDE? IT'S JUST SIMPLE - I'VE GOT TO GET RID OF THAT BIRD - HE'S IN MY WAY - HA! MAYBE YOU CAN SUGGEST A BETTER WAY, EH?
YES - I'M QUITE SURE I CAN -

THE NEBBS—A Letter. By Sol Hess

GOOD MORNING, STEVE! WHAT'S WRONG? THIS IS THE FIRST TIME I'VE SEEN A HAPPY EXPRESSION ON THAT MAP FOR DAYS!!
I GOT A LETTER FROM NELLIE AND SHE CALLS ME "DEAR STEVE"
9-28
"DEAR STEVE. I WOULD BE UNGRATEFUL IF I DID NOT ANSWER YOUR NUMEROUS LETTERS AND LONG DISTANCE PHONE CALLS - YOU NEED NOT THINK YOUR LOVE AND RESPECT FOR ME IS NOT APPRECIATED - IF NOTHING EVER COMES OF IT, IT WILL BE A FINE AND LASTING MEMORY IN MY LIFE --NELLIE"
ISN'T THAT A NICE LETTER - SHE SAYS "DEAR STEVE"
BROTHER RUDY, SHE IS A GREAT GIRL!
I'LL NEVER SAY ANYTHING DIFFERENT!

PAM—"A Wonderful Compliment!" By A. W. Brewerton

WHAT MADE ME BECOME INTERESTED IN YOU, MISS POTTER? WELL, I'LL TELL YOU - I ATTRIBUTE ANY SUCCESS I HAVE MADE IN LIFE TO MY JUDGMENT OF MEN, MY ABILITY TO PICK THE RIGHT ONE FOR THE RIGHT PLACE!
WHEN I FIRST MET YOU IT WAS DURING A VERY UNHAPPY PERIOD OF MY LIFE - AND TO ME THEN, YOU STOOD FOR ALL THAT WAS GOOD AND JOYOUS AND UNSELFISH! - THAT WAS MY JUDGMENT OF YOU - AND I RESOLVED THEN, IF I WERE EVER FREE TO DO SO, I WOULD SEEK TO - TO KNOW YOU BETTER!

35 RICHLAND RESIDENTS WIN CITIZEN PAPERS

Reception for Group to Be Held Monday Evening at Legion Home.

Mansfield and Richland county had 35 new citizens today, representing 13 nationalities.

The 35 foreign-born residents, who were awarded their naturalization rights yesterday by Common Pleas Judge C. H. Huston, were members of a class of 49 whose citizenship petiitons were heard by the court.

Only one of the group was refused, while 13 other petitions were continued to the next hearing in six months because the applicants failed to answer the requirements of federal immigration laws.

The successful candidates for citizenship will receive their naturalization papers from Fred R. Zellner, county clerk of courts, Monday night at a reception in their honor at the American Legion home on Park avenue west. The program will be in charge of the Legion auxiliary.

To become an American citizen the applicants had to show evidence of five years' residence in the United States, a knowledge of governmental affairs, and a record of good behavior during their residence in this country.

Here Are New Citizens.

The following persons will receive their naturalization papers: John Arnold, 3 France street, Mansfield; Paolo Cosintino, 245 West Sixth street; Christina Schwarz, Mansfield; John Zimmerman, 277 North Main street; Gertrude Tietz, 141 Blymyer avenue; Avangelos Zahopolos, 295 North Main street; Peter Vidon, 222½ North Main street; Antonija Carr, 624 Bowman street; Katherine Fischer, R. D. 5; Yovan Mangulovich, 228 North Main street; Anna Bilka, Shelby; Theresia Pival, 227 Home avenue; Virginia Ballitch, R. D. 1, Lucas; Joan Pupala, 253 South Adams street; Thresia Andree, 351 Ohio street; Charles Falk, 30 South Mulberry street; Elizabeth Bogner, 158 Gibson avenue; Stephen Kareff, 171 West Sixth street; Louisa Nemeth, 119 Grace street.

Charles Sherban, 162 Lewis avenue; Paul R. Jerger, 123 Lily street; Eva Rupanovic, 6 Kohler street; Peter Lissakam, R. D. 4; John R. MacDonald, 173½ East Third street; Margaret Bruce, 45 Myers avenue; Katharine F. Haring, 464 Shepard road; Ferdinando Barabani, 244 Bowman street; Goran J. Christoff, 27 John Long avenue; Katherine Hager, R. D. 2, Crestline; Margaret Holzwarth, 431 Fourth avenue; Adam Holzwarth, jr., R. D. 1; Frank Carr, 483 Bowman street; James Hunter, R. D. 4; Rosario Nucifora, 20 Glessner avenue; and John Angelini, 33 Myers avenue.

FRANCE MOVES TO SAFEGUARD PRICELESS ART

Precautions Against Raids Are Carefully Planned by Government Officials.

(By United Press)

PARIS — France already has taken precautionary measures to save from possible aerial attack her priceless art treasures, museum collections, national monuments and fine buildings.

But aerial bombs can be dropped on every inch of French territory the moment war begins and France is fearful that her attempts to save such treasures as the Cathedral at Rheims may be fruitless.

The program for constructing air-bomb shelters in Paris included those for hospitals, barracks and ministerial departments, and museums. All were completed a year ago. Museum keepers and a specially trained squad of municipal workers can be mobilized for the placing of these treasures in vaults the instant hostilities begin. The same plans are being pushed for all of the provincial museums of importance.

Under the department of beaux-arts—a branch of the ministry of education—a complete classification of all art treasures, private as well as public owned — is now complete. It is understood that the department already has prepared to round up such treasures in case of hostilities.

Spanish Methods Adopted.

From the experiences of the Spanish war modern methods of protection of public buildings and statues have been studied by this department and will be applied in case of war. Sand-bag forms will be built around statues and the walls of buildings will be reinforced with sandbags and props. Precious stained-glass windows of churches will be removed and stored away in bomb proof shelters.

There remains great anxiety about the fate of art treasures in case of war. The principal fear is that of sudden and massive air bombardments. In such a case, not only would all important French cities be open to attack, but the immediate utilization of anti-aircraft defense would force the aggressor planes to high altitudes where accuracy would be limited. Instead of direct objectives, such as official buildings, anything in their vicinity would suffer

A striking example of this fear is expressed in a national petition now circulating in France, demanding that the government remove an important military air base from the town of Chartres for fear that the cathedral will be destroyed in case of war.

Rotary Hears of Need for Younger Men In Business

Sam Vining's "one-man crusade" for placement of young men in jobs in which they can "learn the business" was brought to Mansfield Rotarians in a talk at Tuesday's meeting at the Mansfield-Leland hotel

Vining, who is in the sales department of Westinghouse, based his talk on the need for infiltration of young men into many lines of business, in order to develop successors to older men on whom each such business is now dependent.

He suggested that every proprietor or manager of a business or agency should look about for a promising youth, willing to start at a small wage and work up to more pay and finally to a complete knowledge of all parts of the business

Dr. Charles G. Brown was program chairman, with R D Idea presiding Next week's meeting of Rotary will be 'ladies' night," with dinner and program at Westbrook Country club

DEFIANT PILOT HURT IN CRASH

2 Companions Injured As Plane Falls At Portsmouth.

PORTSMOUTH — (AP)— William Brand, 20-year-old Portsmouth aviator who recently disregarded an order that grounded him at Buffalo, N. Y., was in a hospital today with two companions, all injured critically when Brand's ship crashed here late yesterday.

Doctors expected the youth to recover from a skull fracture, but expressed doubt that his friends, Carl W. Anderson, 21, and Curt Morris, 46, would survive. Anderson suffered internal injuries and fractures while Morris' back was broken.

According to witnesses, the plane fell about 600 feet shortly after taking off from an airport.

PRIZE HORSES COMPETE HERE

Columbus, Delaware Stables Enter Raemelton Riding Club Show Sunday.

Two of the best known saddle horse enthusiasts in Ohio notified James Bailey, president of Raemelton Riding club today that they would enter horses in the Raemelton Horse show which will be staged at Raemelton Farms Sunday afternoon.

James Marker, owner of the Blendon farm and stables at Columbus, and Eli Long of Delaware, owner of the White Star farms and prominent in horse show circles of the nation for many years, will bring several of their top ranking horses to the show to compete for the $400 in cash prizes and trophies.

Marker will enter Lee Penny, a winning horse in the five-gaited class at the state fair this year, and Santa Boy, owned by Charles Sawyer of Cincinnati but stabled at the Marker farms, which won first prize in the three-gaited class at the state fair Fred George of Blendon farm will be up on both horses.

Star Princess, who won the five-gaited stake at the Franklin county fair this year and one of the ranking entries at the state fair, and Heavenly Star, a three-gaited mare, will be brought here from the Long stables. Long has participated in former horse shows here

The horse show, which is open to the public, will be staged outdoors if the weather is permissable, and in the big riding hall at Raemelton if it rains, Bailey said.

Single admission tickets and boxes for the horse show went on sale today at the office of the Franklin Finance company, 54 West Third street.

Arrangements also have been made to have the Senior High School band play for the show.

LOUDONVILLE — The Ohio Fuel Gas company today had opened a gas well with a 2,500,000 cubic feet capacity on the John Emery farm south of here. It is the best of a dozen or more wells drilled in this section, reports said.

DISTRICT SPLIT

Farm Security Board Names New Richland Supervisor.

Appointment of H. B. Swearingen of Jackson as rural rehabilitation supervisor in the Mansfield district and elimination of Ashland county from the district were announced today by Federal Farm Security administration officials.

Swearingen will succeed Thomas C. Wiley as supervisor in the Mansfield area. Wiley was transferred to Ashland. The district, formerly made up of Richland and Ashland counties, now includes only Richland county.

Miss Roberta Falkenstein was named home management supervisor at Mansfield to succeed Mrs. Ruby Engle who was transferred to the Marion-Union counties district.

With its Mansfield headquarters in the basement of the courthouse, the farm security administration releases loans to qualified farmers for the rehabilitation of low-income farm families.

GORED BY BULL

POMEROY — (INS) — The timely arrival of two fellow farmhands today saved the life of Fred Johnson, 45, who was being gored by a vicious bull on a farm near Pomeroy. Johnson suffered severe bruises and a dislocated shoulder.

COLUMBUS — (INS) — Beulah race track officials sought to determine today the cause of a fire which leveled one of the 18 barns and injured "Jane D." A mare owned by George Norris, of New London

Floyd Garriot, a pony boy, discovered the blaze and freed the mare from her stall, but not before she had been scorched.

MSGR. GOEBEL AMONG 9 INVESTED AS DOMESTIC PRELATE IN TOLEDO

In the traditional and age-old rites of the Catholic church, the Rt. Rev. Msgr. R. C. Goebel, pastor of St. Peter's church, received the robes of domestic prelate and the title of right reverend monsignor at investiture ceremonies this morning at Toledo.

The investiture was conducted by the Most Rev. Karl J. Alter, D. D., bishop of Toledo, and was held in the Queen of the Most Holy Rosary cathedral. Msgr. Goebel was one of nine members of the diocesan clergy to be invested, including Rt. Rev. Msgr. Max J. Walz, chancellor of the Toledo diocese and brother of Rev. Michael J. Walz, assistant pastor of St. Peter's church.

Rt. Rev. Msgr. Francis S. Legowski, pastor of St. Anthony's church, Toledo, was the celebrant at the solemn high mass while Msgr. Goebel preached the sermon.

Others who received the honor of domestic prelate in addition to Msgrs. Goebel, Walz and Legowski, were the Rt. Rev. Msgrs. William Zierolf, St. Mary's church, and William F. Murphy, St. Peter's and Paul's church, both of Sandusky; James Elder, St. Rose's, Lima; George H. Lang, St. John's, Defiance; James Higginbotham, St. Mary's, Tiffin, and James Arnoldi, St. Joseph's, Fremont.

Msgr. Goebel will celebrate a solemn high mass at 10 a. m. tomorrow at St. Peter's church, the first since his investiture. Members of the clergy of the Mansfield deanery which includes Richland and Crawford counties and of which Msgr. Goebel is dean, will assist at the mass.

A civic and parochial reception in honor of the new domestic prelate will be held at 8 p m. tomorrow in the church hall.

TOLD OF DEATH

Galion Learns of Demise of Mrs. S. E. Kaetzel, 54.

GALION — Word has been received here of the death of Mrs. S. E. Kaetzel, 54, wife of a former Market Street Methodist church pastor here. She died Monday afternoon at her home in Birmingham. She was in ill health for about a year and a half. Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon.

Rev. and Mrs. Kaetzel came to Galion in 1919, and remained here until Rev. Kaetzel was transferred to Pomeroy in 1924. From Pomeroy he went to Defiance and then to Birmingham.

Surviving besides the husband are a son, Samuel who is a student at Northwestern university, Evanston; and two daughters, Miriam who is a student at Baldwin-Wallace, and Esther, at home.

Mrs Kaetzel was a member of the Order of Eastern Star, and Rev. Kaetzel belonged to the Galion Masonic lodge

HELP STOMACH DIGEST FOOD
Without Laxatives—and You'll Eat Everything from Soup to Nuts

The stomach should digest two pounds of food daily. When you eat heavy, greasy, coarse or rich foods or when you are nervous, hurried or chew poorly—your stomach pours out too much fluid. Your food doesn't digest and you have gas, heartburn, nausea, pain or sour stomach. You feel sour, sick and upset all over.

Doctors say never take a laxative for stomach pain. It is dangerous and foolish It takes those little black tablets called Bell-ans for Indigestion to make the excess stomach fluids harmless, relieve distress in 5 minutes and put you back on your feet. Relief is so quick it is amazing and one 25c package proves it. Ask for Bell-ans for Indigestion.

CRESTLINE—Miss Esther Krause of Elyria spent Tuesday with Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Bender and with Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Beck and family. The latters' son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Beck of Elyria were also guests of the Beck family.

HITLER INVITES 4-POWER PARLEY TO AVERT FIGHT

Accedes to Mussolini's Proposal After Duce Telephones In Response to Message From U. S.; Credit Goes to Roosevelt.

Earl of Perth, British ambassador to Italy.

Thus, the credit for the move that postponed the war Europe has feared—if it has not actually averted it for generations—rests on the shoulders of three men. President Roosevelt, Premier Chamberlain and Premier Mussolini.

But the major portion of that credit seemed rightfully to belong to President Roosevelt, head of the greatest democracy on the face of the earth.

Not only did he appeal to Hitler and Mussolini, but he also appealed to all of Germany's potential allies in the event of a conflict, and to 63 other nations of the world, asking all of them to bring pressure to bear on Hitler to avoid a conflict. Japan, engaged in a war of its own in China was one of the great powers to which the president addressed his appeal.

Contents Kept Secret.

The exact nature of the messages was not disclosed, but it was evident that Mr. Roosevelt, in making a second public appeal to Chancellor Hitler late last night in an effort to avert German mobilization, decided on a behind-the-scene course to augment this government's action.

All the White House and state department would reveal concerning the messages was that they were "in behalf of the preservation of world peace."

The effect of this government's summonnig of world opinion against war was apparent immediately when Chancellor Hitler invited the heads of government of Great Britain, France and Italy to sit down with him around a conference table at Munich tomorrow and discuss the grave problem of whether the world shall have peace or war.

The correspondent of International News Service in Rome, writing of Mussolini's unexpected action in persuading Hitler to agree to a conference, wrote that by his action "Mussolini" has assured himself of immortality in the world's history by acting in concert with the world's greatest democracies to halt the onward sweep toward another European conflict."

Roosevelt's Appeal.

In the appeal he addressed last night to Hitler, President Roosevelt made the suggestion that all the nations involved in the controversy should meet to seek a common ground for settlement.

"Present negotiations still stand open," he said. "They can be continued if you will give the word."

He made it clear at the same time, however, that the United States would neither sponsor nor attend such a meeting and that it was for Europe to work out its own solution unaided.

He had made his pleas for peace, he said, because:

"The conscience and the impelling desire of the people of my country demand that the voice of their government be raised again and yet again to avert and to avoid war."

The decision to send the second appeal was reached at a cabinet meeting yesterday afternoon. Shortly before Mr. Roosevelt and his cabinet had listened to Premier Chamberlain's speech from London and carefully examined Hitler's reply to the president's earlier appeal.

Brought War Closer?

To some of the president's advisers, informed persons said, it appeared the fuehrer had carried the world even closer to war by the languge of his reply than he had in previous statements.

The reichsfuehrer's reply said the possibility of adjusting the Sudeten question had been "exhausted" and made clear Germany would regard Czechoslovakia as responsible if war came.

The president met press correspondents immediately after the cabinet session, but would not discuss the foreign situation.

At dusk, Secretary of State Hull and Under-Secretary Welles returned to the White House, and in a historic two-and-a-half hour conference, the note was drafted. It was sent off soon thereafter so that it would reach Berlin well before dawn today and possibly before any irrevocable steps had been taken there.

In his message, the president noted Hitler's historical review of errors contributing to the present threatened war, but said the chief question now was "the fate of the world today and tomorrow."

"The world asks of us who at this moment are heads of nation the supreme capacity to achieve the destinies of nations without forcing upon them as a price, the mutilation and death of millions of citizens," he said.

"Should you agree to a solution in this peaceful manner I am convinced that hundreds of millions throughout the world would recognize your action as an outstanding historic service to all humanity."

Chamberlain Breaks News.

First announcement of the fuehrer's welcome gesture of peace was made by Britain's premier, Neville Chamberlain, at the conclusion of a long and doleful account of the European war crisis before the house of commons.

Chamberlain, 69, quiet and reserved almost to the point of stodiness, staged his dramatic announcement in a manner worthy of the stage.

He finished his speech, told how Hitler had expressed himself as willing to risk a world war for the Sudetenland, described in detail his heart-breaking, unsuccessful efforts at mediation, and added amidst a tense silence:

"I have something else to tell the house now.

"Herr Hitler has promised to withhold mobilization for 24 hours and has invited M. Daladier, Signor Mussolini and myself to meet him in Munich tomorrow morning.

"I shall go and see what I can do as a last effort."

There was a moment of strained, incredulous silence, and the house then broke into a bedlam.

House In Uproar.

Members jumped to their feet and leaped upon the red leather benches of the house, shouting and screaming like madmen. Papers were thrown into the air, clothes dishevelled in the unprecedented, joyous confusion.

Chamberlain's theatrical presentation of the most electrifying news Britain and the world has received in years was not entirely planned.

While he was in the midst of his speech, Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir John Simon handed him a piece of paper on which news of Hitler's invitation and postponement of the mobilization decree had been scribbled in pencil.

Delays Mobilization.

This little note also carried the disclosure that Mussolini had sent his ambassador in Berlin to German Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop, asking him to obtain from Hitler a promise that mobilization would be postponed. To this the fuehrer agreed.

As the cheering and waving on the floor and in the gallery of the house continued unabated, Chamberlain tried for several moments to make himself heard.

Then, when the house finally realized he had something more to say, they quieted down. Speaking in a low voice that he controlled with utmost difficulty, the premier said:

"No member will not feel his heart leap to know that the crisis once more is postponed.

"I need not say what my answer to the invitation will be.

"I hope the house will be prepared to release me now to go and see what I can make of this last effort."

There were a few brief comments from members, entirely unheard and overlooked in the excitement, and the house adjourned until Monday after Chamberlain turned to the speaker of the house and said in an almost inaudible voice:

"I cannot say any more now. I know the house will release me."

Greatest Ovation.

Never in the history of the house of commons had any man been given such an ovation as that which Chamberlain received.

At one moment, the house was in a state of abject depression, convinced from the premier's words that war could not be avoided and that the morrow might see wings over London.

The next it was a wildly cheering, gesticulating mass of humanity, almost grateful to Hitler for his final agreement to negotiate, and adulating the hawk-nosed, sharp-eyed old man who had given every ounce of his British soul and determination to the cause of peace.

Chamberlain had revealed that in his message to Premier Mussolini appealing to Il Duce to make representation to Berlin, he gave this pledge:

"I have already guaranteed that the Czech promises shall be carried out and I feel confident that there will be a full agreement within a week."

Before Hitler's invitation was received, Chamberlain disclosed, he had appealed to Il Duce not only to restrain Hitler but to join in a conference designed to settle the problem once and for all this week.

Poignant Question.

In his last letter to Hitler, the prime minister said, he penned these words:

"Will you take the responsibility for starting a world war which may be the end of civilization for the sake of a few days' delay in settling this question."

When the tumult had died sufficiently to let the opposition in the house know that Chamberlain had requested adjournment of the extraordinary session for a few days while the wheels of war-jammed international peace machinery are set in motion once again, laborites and liberals jumped to his support.

Major Clement Attlee, laborite opposition leader, immediately supported the adjournment with the words:

"When the house reassembles in a short time the war clouds may have lifted."

Sir Archibald Sinclair, liberal leader, George Lansbury, laborite and James Maxton, leader of the left wing, joined in expressing their gratitude to Chamberlain and wished him Godspeed on his mission.

All London Celebrates.

News of Chamberlain's dramatic announcement spread throughout London like wildfire.

Huge crowds gathered outside the old parliament buildings cheered, clapped and yelled "Good old Chamberlain."

The strains of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" rang through streets already dug with gaping holes designed for air raid shelters. Newspapers rushed to the streets with extra editions.

As if by magic, the pall of gloom which for the past week has hung over the capital was lifted and dispelled. Pubs, cafes and bars were immediately jammed with celebrants.

In Downing street, where Chamberlain had to fight his way through immense crowds to reach famous No. 10, the premier was accorded an ovation that could not be termed less than hysterical.

Mustering a smile that came from the depths, Chamberlain waved his hand to the cheering throng and cried:

"It's all right this time."

It had been a dark picture that Chamberlain painted for the house before he made his sensational announcement of tomorrow's meeting.

He had told in detail of his conversations with Hitler in Berchtesgaden and Godesberg, of Hitler's unequivocal stand for the cession of Sudeten territory, and of developments up to the present.

"We are faced with a situation which has no parallel since 1914," he said.

As he spoke to a house packed to the rafters with peers, parliamentarians and distinguished visitors who included Queen Mary and the Duchess of Kent, Great Britain was mobilizing her gigantic battle fleet and rushing all preparations for seemingly inevitable war.

MARSHAL OTEY WALKER AND THE LOCAL FIREMEN PUT ON THEIR FALL INSPECTION AT THE FIRE STATION TODAY

ACE BRIGODE'S BAND TO PLAY FOR ANNUAL POLICE BALL OCT. 17

Plans for the fifth annual police ball to be held Oct. 17 at the Coliseum were announced today by the Mansfield Police Recreation club, sponsors of the event.

Nearly 4,000 tickets were being printed today and will be in the hands of officers tomorrow who guarantee to "sell out." More than 3,000 persons are expected to attend the affair.

Ace Brigode and his Virginians, heard regularly over station WLW, Cincinnati, and the Mutual broadcasting system will play for dancing from 9 p. m. until 1 a. m.

Officers on the committee said there would be no floor show this year and that the entire evening would be given over to dancing. The grand march will start at 9 p. m.

Members of the recreation club said that proceeds of the dance will be used to purchase equipment for the police department, including ammunition for target practice.

Members of the committee in charge are Police Chief Meade K. Bates and Patrolmen Paul Martin, O. D. Fair, John Gilbert and Gordon Drury.

FORTUNE'S HIS

Marshall Field, III, Signs Name and Gets $100,000,000.

CHICAGO—(INS)—A flourish of his pen at noon today was the simple gesture that gained Marshall Field, III, grandson of the pioneer Chicago merchant, a hundred million dollars.

Having reached 45, Field was to receive accrued income of the Field estate.

In 1943, this sum will be augmented by half a billion dollars more when Field comes into possession of the main part of the family's vast holdings.

The ceremony transferring $100,000,000 to Field today was to be conducted without ostentation. It was said the heir plans to make public use of his fortune.

OFFICE, HOME LOOTED OF $25

Thieves Take Child's Bank From Residence, Raid Desk Drawer.

Police today were investigating the looting of a residence and a downtown office yesterday in which thieves carried off $25.

A thief entered the home of Owen Fighter, 43 Atchison avenue, and after ransacking the first floor, carried off a child's bank containing $6.50 and a carton of cigarets.

W. E. Morrissey, 247 Helen avenue, told police yesterday that while he was absent 10 minutes from his office in the Bird building that a desk drawer had been looted of $19 in bills.

ACT IN TAX SUITS

2 Other Defendants Seek to Block Check of Records.

Counsel for the Citizens National Bank and Trust company and J. A. Rigby, defendants in two taxpayers' suits seeking to collect allegedly unpaid personal taxes, today filed motions in common pleas court in a move to prevent inspection of county and state tax books.

The motions, submitted by Attorneys Voegele, Hutchison and Schettler, are identical with those filed two days ago by two other defendants in similar suits.

They ask that an amended petition seeking authority to examine tax books be stricken from court records on the grounds that it has no connection with the original suits filed several months ago by Michael Hallabrin, Mansfield.

Inspection of tax books by attorneys for Hallabrin was halted recently by a temporary injunction granted in common pleas court.

2 GUNMEN LOOT BANK OF $4,000

Rob Columbus Institution, Flee In Speeding Auto.

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Two gunmen robbed the Clintonville branch of the Ohio National bank at noon today. Unverified reports said they escaped with about $4,000.

The robbers fled in an automobile. Alarms were broadcast by the city police and state highway patrol and all roads leading from the suburban north side district were watched.

It was the second Ohio National branch bank held up this year. On Feb. 4, four men looted the Hilltop branch, but less than 12 hours later three were fatally shot and the fourth was captured by police.

the need for business leadership.

"What can the individual do? What can the businessman do?" Walker, who doffed his coat and rolled up his sleeves, asked this question frequently.

"It is the individual, you and me, that make up America. When enough individuals understand what makes prosperity, understand the power each of us has, and then acts—business recovery will get beyond the bounds of labor," Walker asserted.

He pointed out that in addition to the "greatest gold supply ever known — more than half of all the gold in the world," there is more than 25 billion dollars in savings accounts in banks throughout the nation owned by 40 million Americans.

"If those 40 million Americans would place only 20 per cent of the 25 billions into circulation by purchasing only the bare necessities which they need, it would create a demand that labor could not under any circumstances supply."

Walker said the nation has business leaders but they are not leading the masses and that people are following other leaders.

"Business men are too busy orating to each other to teach a discouraged citizenry. America will follow its right leaders when the right leaders come along," he said.

He told his audience that the troubles and dangers facing the American people today were the result of the depression and of a depression of psychology.

He asserted there is no such thing as governmental prosperity "for the government exists only to protect the people while they do their business, and that no laws could inspire or even stimulate the process known as business."

"Public opinion existing today reveals glaring fallacies," he said. "If it were not so treacherous they would be amusing. Trying to create additional credit dollars by an orgy of spending and an unbalanced budget, urging industry and business to expand and proceed by damning the profit motive, seeking to find industrial peace by encouraging labor to organize against their employers is a process that is futile and fatal.

"But why do millions of Americans do it?" he asked.

"They believe in this, for they have been taught the same by their leaders. Prosperity demands progress—moving forward. We cannot stabilize nor guarantee hope or happiness where we now stand, or in the volume of business we are now doing."

Walker declared that the forward movement which will bring business recovery and increased sales to Mansfield requires leadership.

"You men," he told the group, "should be the leaders. You are professional and business men with understanding, and in this hour of need America depends on you for the business leadership that is the hope of the nation."

Walker was introduced by Judge C. H. Huston president of the Chamber of Commerce. Others who spoke briefly were Mayor C. M. Hunter, O. C. McCormick, head of the Chamber's membership committee and C. H. Henkel, former president of the organization.

NEW NAME FOR IT

Bette Davis on 'Matrimonial Vacation;' Denies Divorce.

HOLLYWOOD — (INS) — Bette Davis, popular film star, and her husband, Harmon Nelson, orchestra leader, were on a matrimonial vacation today.

Miss Davis would not comment on the separation other than to say she and her husband "have decided to take a matrimonial vacation." She had recently denied rumors of divorce.

PRISONER FLEES

Mansfielder Serving Sentence In Columbus Workhouse Escapes.

A Mansfield man who walked away from the Columbus workhouse after serving ten days of a fine of $50 and costs on a drunk and disorderly charge was being sought by authorities today, dispatches from Columbus said.

They said the fugitive was James McDonald, 34, who was sentenced in municipal court here Sept. 17. McDonald walked away from one of the farm gangs at the institution, dispatches said.

HITLER HEEDS CALL FOR PEACE

seeing plans for nation-wide mobilization.

Mussolini demanded — or requested:

(1) Immediate consent of the reichsfuehrer to suspension of the German ultimatum to Czechoslovakia to pave the way for further negotiations of the disputed Sudetenland.

(2) Assent of Hitler to the now-scheduled four-power conference at Munich, with provision for participation by the United States, if it so desires, in an effort to secure "an honorable settlement" of Germany's demands.

Success of Il Duce in the unaccustomed role of peace leader completely changed complexion of the crisis, not only in bellicose countries beyond the Italian borders, but also at home.

Within the space of seven hours, the Italian empire, which obviously had been rehearsing for war, was changed suddenly into a champion of peace—due in large part to the pleas of President Roosevelt and Premier Chamberlain and Mussolini's agreement to use his influence with Hitler.

A personal letter from Chamberlain to Mussolini was handed Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign minister, and a similar missive from President Roosevelt was given Count Ciano later. Rapid-fire action by Mussolini in behalf of peace immediately halted the threat of war and opened the way for peaceful settlement of the entire issue.

Simultaneously, the Italian press which had been champing at the bit and prominently displaying belligerent statements suddenly softened its attitude and played up the new peace moves as the one hope of peace.

APPROVED AGAIN

WPA Clears Up Technicalities on County Road Program.

A WPA grant for $627,375 for a a $1,000,000 road, bridge and street construction program in Richland county was approved a second time today by the federal government to permit the county's sub-divisions to share in the project.

Approved several months ago, the program was well under way, but complications arose when an attempt was made to include Mansfield, Shelby and a number of townships in the blanket project. Today's approval was to clear up any technicalities. A new request was submitted and approved to eliminate possible hitches in the road and street improvement work.

HERE'S APPEAL EASING STRIFE

Text of Roosevelt Message Sent Hitler in Plea for New Negotiations.

of the world today and tomorrow. The world asks of us who at this moment are heads of nations the supreme capacity to achieve the destinies of nations without forcing upon them as a price, the mutilation and death of millions of citizens.

Resort to force in the great war failed to bring tranquility. Victory and defeat were alike sterile. That lesson the world should have learned. For that reason above all others I addressed on Sept. 26 my appeal to your excellency and to the president of Czechoslovakia and to the prime ministers of Great Britain and of France.

The two points I sought to emphasize were, first, that all matters of difference between the German government and the Czechoslovak government could and should be settled by pacific methods; and, second, that the threatened alternative of the use of force on a scale likely to result in a general war is as unnecessary as it is unjustifiable. It is therefore, supremely important that negotiations should continue without interruption until a fair and constructive solution is reached.

My conviction on these two points is deepened because responsible statesmen have officially stated that an agreement in principle has already been reached between the governments of the German reich and the government of Czechoslovakia, although the precise time, method and detail of carrying out that agreement remain at issue.

Whatever existing differences maye be, and whatever their merits may be—and upon them I do not and need not undertake to pass—my appeal was solely that negotiations be continued until a peaceful settlement is found, and that thereby a resort to force be avoided.

Present negotiations still stand open. They can be continued if you will give the word. Should the need for supplementing them become evident, nothing stands in the way of widening their scope ir to a conference of all the nations directly interested in the present controversy. Such a meeting to be held immediately—in some neutral spot in Europe—would offer the opportunity for this and correlated questions to be solved in a spirit of justice, of fair dealing, and, in all human probability, with greater permanence.

In my considered judgment, and in the light of the experience of this century, continued negotiations remain the only way by which the immediately problem can be disposed of upon any lasting basis.

Should you agree to a solution in this peaceful manner I am convinced that hundreds of millions throughout the world would recognize your action as an outstanding historic service to all humanity.

Allow me to state my unqualified conviction that history, and the souls of every man, woman, and child whose lives will be lost in the threatened war will hold us and all of us accountable should we omit any appeal for its prevention.

The government of the United States has no political involvements in Europe, and will assume no obligations in the conduct of the present negotiations. Yet in our own right we recognize our responsibilities as a part of a world of neighbors.

The conscience and the impelling desire of the people of my country demand that the voice of their government be raised again and yet again to avert and to avoid war.

(Signed) Franklin D. Roosevelt.

PRAGUE: Czechs Prepare For Invasion, Offer Peace Prayers

PRAGUE—(AP)—Czechoslovakia rushed final preparations for war and prayed for peace today, awaiting a radio address by Premier Jan Syrovy.

The cabinet decided last night that the premier should speak to the nation today, the name day of Bohemia's patron saint, St. Wenceslas, but the exact time of his address was not stated.

While troop trains carried additional defenders to the frontiers and Czechoslovakia was blacked out as a precaution against possible air raids, Cardinal Achbishop Kaspar appealed to all Catholics to pray that war might be averted.

The nation counted with anxiety the minutes to the expiration of Chancellor Hitler's ultimatum Saturday.

Fear of impending disaster brought most political dissenters, outside the Sudeten Germans themselves, into a united front behind the government.

A Slovak autonomist lader, Deputy Sidor, declared loyalty to the cabinet, and further support came from the Association of German Democratic youth in Czechoslovakia which informed President Benes it was ready to fight for integrity of the nation.

Full preparations were taken to protect Prague against air raids. Pusuit planes were ready to take off to halt any invading bombers and hills surrounding the capital were studded with anti-aircraft batteries.

It was indicated President Benes would send a new message to Poland today on the question of the Polish minority population in Czechoslovakia.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1938.

America could not have been built on a philosophy of dependence on government for the necessities of life.

In a peninsular way, Czechoslovakia appears on the map as a narrow neck of land extending dangerously into Germany.

It pays now and then to stop arguing about public affairs and conduct a little private inquiry into what young people you know are thinking about.

'Step Forward With Mansfield.'

MANSFIELD as a city of opportunity in a land of unlimited opportunities was envisioned in the inspirational talk given at last night's membership meeting of the Chamber of Commerce by DeLoss Walker, nationally known magazine editor who has won the title of "evangelist of common sense."

Dynamic in style and convincing in argument, Mr. Walker arrayed facts and figures to show the vast potentialities of present-day America if the latent power of its working forces are thrown into a united effort to translate natural resources into products required to supply the needs of 130,000,000 people.

It was made clear, however, that national progress and prosperity is dependent on determined efforts of individuals and communities, and on the creation of real wealth, rather than on paternalistic policies of government or anything that can be done FOR people instead of BY them.

This meeting, the first of a series of membership get-togethers, marked the "Step Forward With Mansfield" campaign of the Chamber of Commerce, which will include enlisting additional members in that organization.

Last night's meeting, with its display of interest and enthusiasm, evidenced the value of such gatherings, not alone for those who attend but also in the extent to which the doctrine of confidence and determination can thus be spread throughout the entire community.

Much has been said, through a number of years, of the importance of Mansfield sustaining an active and aggressive Chamber of Commerce and of the constructive work that has been done by this organization in the interests of Mansfield, not alone in bringing new industries to the city but also in taking leadership or giving co-operation in all progressive community movements.

In order that the Chamber of Commerce may be of greatest possible benefit to the city it is essential that there be a large and interested membership, not alone for the financial support thus assured but also that the working force within the organization may be sufficient to perform the tasks and develop the leadership needed to carry Mansfield forward to even greater accomplishments in the future.

The Chamber of Commerce needs the spirit and morale of many members, each dedicated to a high resolve to make this a better city in which to live, work, own a home and rear a family.

And so the Chamber of Commerce again extends an invitation to join its ranks and "Step Forward With Mansfield."

Considering Medical Insurance.

THERE is much talk about socialized medicine and hospital insurance and of Uncle Sam taking over the ancient duties of Hippocrates. There is approval of half-understood ideas and bitterness against equally misunderstood plans, and the general hubbub that always seems to befog the air when any issue becomes controversial. A few clear points emerge.

One is that there are too many people needing medical care who are not getting it. And along with that there are too many underpaid physicians and nurses. Here the old problem of distribution enters in. Getting the patient to the doctor in time to do some good, without mortgaging the future beyond hope, is the problem here to be solved.

Another point is that where hospital insurance has been put in force by private insurance companies that have done a careful job with their actuarial research, the results have been good. Group insurance of this kind is growing in favor.

A third is that Uncle Sam may not be the best person to handle the problems involved.

A fourth is that the individual relation between doctor and patient must not be prevented. It has been a useful relation for hundreds of years.

And the last point is that no ordinary citizen knows much about this yet, but he is going to have to decide some pretty important questions about it before long, and wisdom lies on the side of finding out as much as he can.

Marion Resumes Community Fund.

WEARIED by frequency of separate campaigns for funds to support welfare and character-building agencies, the neighboring city of Marion has decided to return to the Community Fund method of supporting those necessary agencies.

It appears that Marion abandoned the Community Chest plan eight years ago, as a result of depression difficulties, but found the time and effort required for separate annual campaigns for each agency placed too great a burden on workers and was less satisfactory to donors.

While there are some objectors to the Community Fund plan, fair consideration from all angles leads to the conclusion that no better method has yet been devised to give essential financial support to a number of agencies that must function in every community.

U. S. Leads In Life Insurance.

WHEN it comes to achieving "self-earned social security," the American people leave the rest of the world at the post.

The figures show, for example, that there is about three times as much life insurance in force in this country as in the United Kingdom; about thirty times as much as in Japan, and about sixty times as much as in Sweden.

These figures are important, not only because they show what United States citizens have done to guard against the exigencies of the future, but because of the influence of life insurance on the nation as a whole. Life insurance is a great stabilizing force—and a force that makes for progress and prosperity in the long run.

Watching Trends

—By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON—It doesn't really matter much to us but a general European war would mess up the Washington social business.

With a couple of common-law wars already in progress a lady who wants to get along has to keep her mind on her place cards. What, then, would be the case if a half dozen nations were having it out toe to toe?

It is fairly easy to avoid seating Ambassador Chengting T. Wang of China next to Mrs. Saito, or Ambassador Saito of Japan next to something pretty from the Russian embassy. But if you multiply the difficulties by adding a half dozen European nations, all the coal in Pennsylvania could not thaw out the official chill.

* * *

Pity the Hemstitchers.

WE WENT up to the White House to see about these things, because the White House each year has the first go at the diplomatic corps, with a reception about Christmas time. We got an inside tip that if a really good-sized war came off the diplomatic dinner and reception likely would be cancelled. If that happened, it would start such a flood of party cancellations that flocks of fancy dress shops would be sent to the showers.

Yet all these reports of icy greetings between belligerent diplomats should be taken with a dash of sherbet. Naturally Ambassador Fernando de los Rios of Spain isn't sending any choice bottles of sparkling Madeira around to a German embassy, nor does Saito invite Wang out to split a bottle of sake on a cool evening. But these two oriental diplomats accidentally met face to face at a White House party and exchanged seasonable greetings while their brothers were blasting blazes out of each other along the Yangtze. Diplomatic blood doesn't run very hot.

Democracy Captures Castle.

DEMOCRACY note: A turreted society castle out on Sixteenth street, once the haven of the high, has lately been split up into penny-ante housekeeping apartments. Guv-ment stenographers wait for the bus at the entrance to a driveway that once wouldn't admit an automobile less than a half block long unless it carried a gilt coat of arms. In olden days callers in top hats drove up the palm-bordered driveway to call for the lady fair. Now the lads make a down payment on a clatter-car, drive up to the doorway and honk.

Political democracy has been ascendant for five years and more, but the main reception hall of the White House is still strictly Republican and will remain so for several years. The portraits now hanging there are of Presidents Harding and Coolidge. The last congress appropriated money for a portrait of Hoover and when finished it will replace Harding, who will be sent to obscurity along with Jefferson and Taft. Not until President Roosevelt finishes his term, if custom is followed, will his picture be hung up. Then Coolidge will be sent to the rear, leaving Hoover and Roosevelt staring at each other benignly across the hallway.

* * *

Democracy Note No. 2—During the morning hours of each day the Roosevelts must do their entertaining upstairs in the White House as by practice tourists have right of way until about 1 p. m. Then the visiting tourists are shut out and Mrs. Roosevelt has callers for tea and the like.

Only rarely does she interrupt the stream of tourists to make use of the famed main floor (blue room, green room, etc.) before lunch.

"FLAMING YOUTH"!

The Human Side of the News

—By EDWIN C. HILL

THE state of New York puts advertisements of its recreational and scenic splendors on its bank checks, with beautiful colored pictures and the slogan "The State That Has Everything." About 2,500,000 persons will receive these checks each year.

For some reason or other—I don't propose to mount any barricades, or anything like that—this rubs me the wrong way. It does seem that now is the time when the remaining free governments of the world should make a devout religion of minding their own business. There is austere dignity and power in reserve in the government which limits itself to its few simple prerogatives—public order, national defense, just administration of the law. There is a loss of dignity and a warning of danger when it branches out in bally-hoo of any kind whatsoever.

In itself, this state check advertising probably isn't worth making a fuss about. There is no hint of a state bureaucracy touting on its checks a loyal, as against a disloyal, political and recreational area. So far it is a symptom rather than a menace. But we find its most authentic modern precedent in the early days of Fascist Italy. One of the first things they did was to emblazon their postage stamps with their state slogans, symbols and laudations of their new model government. And from then on, there wasn't a spot of wall space, a barn door, a newspaper or a sidewalk in Italy that wasn't a billboard for "the state that had everything."

* * *

ONE might say that this advertising on state checks is a bit of humanizing of the state and hence all to the good, but any human relationship implies a two-way conversation, and the fact is that you just can't talk back to a state. A friend of mine learned that. It happened this way:

Alarmed over the plight of ordinary citizens in other countries, my friend pondered the fact that, with all our stiff taxes, we've got a lot to be thankful for, with the liberties we still have, and when he was sending a check for his income tax, his patriotism and gratitude moved him to write a letter about as follows:

Dear Government: You're soaking me plenty, but I'm not kicking. I'm still free and footloose to take a sock at you at the next election if I want to, and I haven't got a commissar herding me around with a gun. I still think we're sitting pretty over here, compared with the rest of the world, and I'm willing to pay my share—even if it hurts, which it does. So here's a little surprise for you. I am paying my income tax cheerfully and happily."

What happened afterward is a sad story. Some bureau underling sniffed at this letter and held it up to the light and concluded that there must be something hidden, subversive or evasive in a letter which said an income tax was being paid cheerfully. He put the letter through channels and there was a general agreement that a man who would write such a letter must have something to hide—that he was holding out on a big income. They gave my friend the works. From then on government sleuths were lurking in dark corridors and roosting in his apple tree. His tax accounting was as wide open as a barn door. He had nothing to hide and suffered merely annoyance, aside from writer's cramp filling out innumerable blanks and reports. He told me that cured him of trying to get clubby with a government.

* * *

OUR federal government is up to its ears in advertising and publicity. Its Washington army of press agents is mounting almost daily. Its weekly publicity output deluging the country is measured in tons. Automatically, a new department, commission or bureau is equipped with a publicity staff.

Just how much explanation, enlightenment or apology is necessary with the increasing complexities of modern government deserves more spacious and informed consideration than can be given here. Personally, I am concerned with what appears to be the obvious fact that the use of government money, brains, ink or white paper for anything other than their legal, traditional and institutional uses is out of bounds for a state or federal government.

It is a far cry from innocently touting Niagara Falls of Coney Island on a state check, to a whoop for this or that politician on a WPA check—but, somehow, one thing leads to another in these fast-stepping times.

Seven Billion Dollar Gambling Bill

According to a recent estimate, Americans each year spend seven billion dollars on games of chance. This is almost as much as the total annual expenditures of the national government. Even if doubting statisticians were to divide it by two, the estimate still would represent a staggering sum of money.

But the estimate is not to be divided. Seven billion dollars can be accepted as a fair approximation of America's yearly gambling bill, a bill amounting to more than one-tenth of the entire national income. This is made up of the bets laid on horses, of the money passed across gambling tables, of the pennies, nickels, dimes and quarters aggregately lavished on such things as the furtive "numbers" racket, the back-room crap game, the candy store slot machine, and the popular church bingo. tI is what millions of Americans spend in an almost instinctive urge to make something out of nothing.

The moral and social meanings of such large-scale gambling constitute a fit subject of study for theologians and sociologists. Entirely apart from these, its economic meanings constitute a fit subject of study for economists. Seven billion dollars is a sum of money so large that it hardly can be comprehended. For the ordinary individual at least, it is almost as abstract as certain phases of astro-physics. Yet it is real enough when applied speculatively to real conditions.

Let us suppose, for instance, that the money Americans usually spend on gambling could somehow be pooled together and spent on other things. Such a pooling could cover public relief costs and leave enough over to balance the federal budget besides. Similarly, if the seven billion dollars could all at once be invested in American business, unemployment and hard times virtually would be eliminated.—The Pathfinder.

Compliment To Judge Montgomery

Up in the fifth district court of appeals, Judge Charles W. Montgomery, Newark, was slated to have no opposition for a new term which it was deemed he had earned by hard work and most painstaking attention to his duties. Judge Montgomery is a Republican in politics and once was state chairman, but partisanship was laid aside when he stepped on the bench. So the Democrats took stock of the situation and presented no rival candidate. But recently on nearly the last day an opposition candidate was brought out in Canton and the version of the affair brought here was that it was a radical labor group which was far behind the scenes.

Those who have checked over the region assert that it is not a serious pretension and that good Democrats and equally good Republicans will get together at the proper time and for the moment forget other arguments while they are joining in according to Judge Montgomery a majority that will gratify him, his wife, and an ever-widening circle of friends and admirers. Judge Montgomery was an appointee of former Governor Myers Y. Cooper and a selection of which the former chieftain still is proud.

Why Is a Jitterbug?

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

WON'T I "please write something about those vicious modern dances and those vulgar modern girls"?

Will I? Won't I! TRY 'N' STOP ME!

Only, take it from me, it won't be like you think. So don't say I didn't warn you. And don't cry if I hurt. Which I shall certainly try my darndest to do.

First, a brief word as to SWING. The briefer the better, sez I. Yes, I know—some of the Mystic Mumblers attribute much merit to the late Bix Beiderbecke's umpa-yah. But to my uncouth jungle ear, it's just musical hari-kari. And sounds like a Gastric Ulcer plus a Dose of Hives doing a fling while crossing a Hog-wallow with the Stew burning. But so does Grand Opera. And I'd prefer "Swanee River" to either of 'em. So, s'far as I'm concerned, the youngsters can not only have their Swing but also keep it—as far away as possible.

But when it comes to this Jitterbug proposition, my nonchalance vanishes immediately—if not sooner. And when I witness a nice, sweet, normal kid turning flip-flops with one foot locked firmly in the chandelier and the other draped around the Boy Friend's Adam's apple—meanwhilst she discourses on "gut-buckets" . . . "agony-pipes" . . . and "jives" . . . my feelings become acute, if not downright epileptic.

From which you might gather that I do not admire Jitterbug cavorting—and you'd gather right. It does not surprise me—for reasons which I will presently divulge. Nor does it shock me—cruel as this blow must be to many a complacent sprig who undoubtedly feels that he has plumbed the depths of hell in his "killer-diller" orgy. Hate to be a meanie, baby—but I've seen real sin. And this is just a setting-up exercise.

No, it doesn't horrify, but it DOES bore me. And it DOES sicken me. And it DOES sadden me, as I watch the charm and eager witchery of youth, tricked and betrayed into the ugliest game of Grunt and Grin, Sweat and Squat that ever masqueraded as rash and gay adventure!

For that's what it's all about . . . that's the come-on which lures these capering infants to the twinkling lights . . . and drives them frantic with Swing's teasing leer—

THEY THINK THEY'RE BEING BIG AND AWFUL BAD!

THEY'RE SURE THEY'RE DOING WILD AND WICKED THINGS!

THEY FEEL THEY'RE TASTING THE FORBIDDEN CUP . . . AND PLAYING LEAP-FROG ON THE SEVEN HELLS!

POOR, CHEATED LAMBS!

Trading their young hunger for adventure, their young dreams of romance, for the bellow and bleat of some rowdy spot that they think is reserved for The Brave!

Poor little young things, tricked and betrayed . . . And you want me to scold them for their audacity and to brand them for their immodesty? THAT I WILL NOT! But I will blame those who are responsible . . . and I will tell you who they are!

Their silly, empty-minded mothers . . . with their frantic clutch at departing Youth and their shoddy, furtive affairs—THEY ARE TO BLAME!

And all of us who strip our aging flesh . . . and foul our withering minds . . . and break our country's laws . . . in an effort to be "young" and "naughty" and "audacious" . . . we are to blame!

We are the ones who have turned God's sweet and starry night into a Jitterbug orgy . . . and God's fragrant, sunny day into a hangover . . .

Six Million Passes.

American railroads have been issuing free passes and tickets to persons other than employes at the rate of 6,000,000 a year. Mileage on these passes amounts to more than 5 per cent of the total passenger revenue. It would be a much larger percentage if it included the free pleasure rides of the well-paid employes of the railroads.

Dummy directors—business men placed on directorates for the sake of wooing freight patronage—are the worst pests of railroad officials in this respect. These dummy directors are given annual passes on the roads with which they are connected, but many of them insist on first-class annual passes for their families on all lines, sometimes with private cars for wedding trips.

The passenger business of many rail lines would be out of the red if full fare were collected for every passenger carried.—Dallas News.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Carl Erbe leaves shortly on one of the few remaining trips of interest which haven't been exhausted by tourists and travelers. This is the "inland passage" from New York to Florida, and he sets out Oct. 15 with two companions in a 60-foot auxiliary sailing yacht.

The trip south will require about three weeks, and on it they will explore little-known bays and coves, threading their way through a maze of small islands so little peopled that electricity is non-existent and the natives, a rural folk who live chiefly by fishing and trapping, still use kerosene lamps.

Erbe's departure this year is a little earlier than usual. He goes south in leisurely fashion, but once there his work will be cut out for him, because he handles Jack Dempsey's Miami restaurant as well as the Patio and Colony clubs.

* * *

THIS means here that the Riviera, Ben Marden's place on the Palisades, is closed and deserted now save for a ground crew and workmen who are putting in new equipment. The entire crew, from waiters and bartenders to chefs, and even Marden's private barber, are on their way south to open the Florida clubs. It's an annual custom with Marden to take his staffs south. Half the year they work in an atmosphere of waving palms and soft sea breezes; the remaining months they are stationed in New York.

Meanwhile, Erbe and two companions are putting that yacht in shipshape condition. If you walk into his Madison avenue office today you'll find him poring over maps, making a careful check of the inland passage. Outside of pack-train trips, it's the one remaining thriller left to travelers in this country. The trip is a long one, and not without its perils. Most of the travel must be done in daytime, which means they'll tie up at quaint ports all the way down the coast. Night cruising is too dangerous . . . too many hidden reefs and shallows waiting to trap unwary pilots.

* * *

THE route they'll take reads like a Rand-McNally map salesman talking Choctaw. . . . They'll go "outside" around Sandy Hook and into Cape May, and from there the trail leads through the Delaware river, the Delaware and Chesapeake canals and on to Norfolk. At the Virginia port they go "inside" again through the Albemarle river and through Currituck Sound, the Allegheny river and Albemarle sound.

From the sound they follow the Pungo river canal and the Neus river, leaving that stream eventually for Vogue sound, after which they come to Indian river. They follow the Indian all the way to Miami.

It'll be quite a trip. They'll make it in leisurely fashion. No hurry, of course. Long days of lazing in the sun, when there isn't work to be done, salt air and plenty of good wholesome grub.

It sounds like a swell jaunt. They asked me if I wanted to go along, but how can you spend three weeks on a boat tracing the inland passage and write a column about New York?

A Farmer's Diary

The Sportsman.

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

I AM no sportsman, in the usual sense. One summer I went to northern Michigan with a friend who was fond of hunting. He had with him a huge shotgun and a trusty rifle, while I went armed with a notebook and a pair of old binoculars.

Many times along the way, my companion would recount to me of deer and bear he had killed among the wilds like those we were passing through; of how in late summer, he saw thousands of geese and ducks along the rims of these lakes, and then he would reach for his old gun, and hold it caressingly. How he could gloat over his kill of lovely, innocent deer, or with delight spread panic among flocks of peaceful waterfowl, was more than I could understand. Yet he is a kind friend, an interesting companion, and I admire his proficiency with his gun, even while I would shudder to use one.

One late afternoon, walking along a slope of a secluded lake, we saw a large bird wing its way across, and with a piercing cry, alight in a thicket. Through my glasses, I saw that the lower feathers were white, while those of the upper wing were mottled darkly.

Without a word, we started for the spot. I scanned the tree tops carefully, and by mere accident, caught sight of a white speck framed by two pine branches. Stealthily we moved closer, until we saw the wary fishhawk looking intently at a widening ripple on the lake.

My friend took aim and fired, just as the mighty bird had taken flight. The shot severed the rear part of the hawk, and it fell, unguided, to the ground. We hurried to the spot, but so well it blended with the forest floor, that we could not find it, until its hooked beak, opened wide in anger and pain, caught my companion's boot. In terror, we both stepped back. For one short moment the bird had conquered us.

As we stood in silence, looking, the ruffled feathers slowly began to drop, and that fierce, antagonistic head fell slowly to the ground. Like a criminal, I walked rapidly from the scene, wishing to forget the stains that would not wash away.

AFRAID TO MARRY + + +

CHAPTER 5

Craig, not suspicious of the thoughts that were steeped so deeply behind the low words she spoke, answered:

"I hope some day someone will change your mind for you, Judy. Is there anything I can do now? Please let us drop by."

Let—us—drop—by. With one little word Craig closed the door that stood open between them, even now. Closed it and locked it for all time.

"No, Craig, I want to make a dazzling impression on your wife, and I'm sunk under my burden tonight. Next month when you come back."

"The first night we're home, Judy. Is it a date?"

"It is."

"It's a date I won't keep," she told the telephone. "That's over."

It was starting to rain. The water came with a monotonous beat against the roof and slanted upon the windows. She closed them, and rang for a maid.

"The trunks, Marie. I might start to pack now."

"But, Miss Judy, I'll attend to that for you."

"I know you will, Marie. You're a darling. But I'd like to see a trunk. Just to have it around to touch makes me feel active. I can't realize I'm awake."

The maid hesitated. She had served the family a long time.

"If it's about Mr. Craig, Miss Judy, don't fret. He loved you first. He'll come back. I know it."

Judy's eyes were almost angry as she answered. "Oh, no, Marie. He mustn't I don't want warmed-over love. I always said marriage didn't last, love was a myth, nice for light operetta, and I thought I believed it. Now it happened that way—I was right—and I don't know why I'm so surprised. But it's all right, Marie. You won't mention it to anyone?"

"No, Miss Judy. But you wait. Love may get sidetracked for a while, but when it's love, it finds its way back."

Judy smiled. "Maybe, Marie, but somebody has to be hurt. And I hate hurts."

* * *

She bound back her brown curls with a gold ribbon, slipped into lounging pajamas of the same bright shade, and mules that matched. She would sort some old programs and souvenirs for saving. Then she would read herself to sleep. The book she wanted was in the library. No need to trouble Marie again. She would get it. In the wide hallway, outside the library door, she stopped.

A tall young man, with rough, red hair and amused gray eyes, was standing there, watching her approach.

* * *

"I HOPED I would see you," said Ronald Birrell, as Judy paused near the library door, which the attorney had just closed behind him. "I think that was why I came, instead of waiting until morning to give your father the papers I brought."

"Why did you want to see me?" she asked, aware of the gleaming gold of her lounging pajamas and mules. "I ran away at noon . . ."

"Maybe that was why. I like a good fight. Are you busy now?"

"Well—hardly!" She glanced at her attire and laughed.

"Then will you take a spin up the river or around the park? I have a car downstairs."

"If you'll give me five minutes to dress."

"Good, I'll wait in the car."

"No, wait in the drawing room, or here in the den. I gather you don't want to go back to the library."

He shook his head. "I've said good night once."

Thus, 10 minutes later, wearing a sheer wine-colored woolen frock and a warm gray jacket and a beret whose style had cost very much, and whose material practically nothing, Judy slipped into the long roadster.

"I got it second-hand. I've always wanted a car. When I was a youngster, running barefooted in the hills, I used to get a glimpse of one going along the roads now and then, and I made up my mind if I ever had money . . ." He stopped and laughed. "Skip it, please."

"But I want to hear."

"Maybe some other time." The car was passing Central park where the trees waved together, their wet leaves cool and distant in the fog. Suddenly a boat horn pierced the silence. Judy started. She almost had forgotten. Craig was going out on that boat . . . going away. Oh, what right had she to be here in a car with a strange man while Craig sailed out of port with a girl she never had seen? If she could turn back the hands of the clock, tear away all the hours between now and last Thursday night . . .

"I'm sorry. I was thinking. I wish that time could retreat."

"How far back would you have it go?"

"To last Thursday night at half-past 10."

"Why then?"

"I made a mistake."

* * *

The boat horn came again, louder. It must be turning its sound on in full force as the ship swung out of its berth into the river.

Ronald Birrell's words were studied when he spoke. "I'm mighty sorry about this Craig Denby's marriage, if it mattered to you. I can't believe it did."

"Why not?" Judy asked.

"I can't think any man would choose another girl if there were the remotest chance that you were interested."

"He didn't think there was. I had been saying no for such a long time, you see."

Ronald Birrell nodded gravely. "People do that. The contrariness of human nature. But maybe you were wiser than you thought."

"Why?"

"You hadn't met me yet." His grin removed all egotism from the words.

Judy smiled, too. "And now that I have?"

"You are running off to Europe to play with the counts and the dukes."

She didn't answer. She wouldn't let anyone know that she was staying in town, hunting a job. Maybe some day, when she was successful, she would drop into the legal offices and tell Ronald.

"Playing is one way to pass time," she murmured.

"I'd hate it." He stepped on the gas and the speedometer flew across the 50 mark, to 55, 60 and 65. "I want to accomplish something."

"I used to. My father put his foot down."

"But it isn't too late! How old are you? Twenty-one? That's infancy. I'm 24, nearly 25."

"That's young to have come so far," Judy reminded him. "Don't you know you have one of the choice legal berths in this city?"

"I do." He said it so humbly she looked at him in surprise. All the gay arrogance and sureness were gone. "That's why I want to make good so badly."

They rode along the park. They turned at Ninety-sixth street, and swung across to the river. Its broad bosom was quiet, except where the raindrops dotted it. Here and there a river barge swung a green lantern. And Ronald began to talk.

* * *

He mentioned a log cabin, scrupulously clean and barren, and a mother who once had taught a term of school, married, had one child and died.

"So my father married again," the voice went on. "A girl who never got beyond the fourth grade. And I started out for myself, when I was about 12."

"Where did you live?"

"Here and there, on that farm and this. Then I came to a college, with a prep school, and the president took me in, let me fix the furnace and care for the lawn and go to school. I stayed there until I finished high school and a year of college."

"But Princeton?" prompted Judy "How did you manage it?"

"Working, saving money, one thing and another. Life's fun, Judy Rogers. Dare it to come on. Smile and meet it. It can't lick you unless you want it to."

* * *

Judy sensed that he was talking, not so much to relieve her mind from her worries, as to make her understand his background, though he would have sworn it was the other reason. They were worlds apart—Park avenue and the mountains of the south where people lived in one-room cabins too often.

Judy had visited in the long rambling, beautiful homes of the southern cities, and shared their luxury and wealth, and now and then someone had suggested a trip into the backwoods. She never had entered one of the far cabins—only the nicely arranged ones by the road. Yet here was a boy who came from one of them, who wanted her to understand. Here was a boy who might some day be great in the legal world.

"What did you see in Denby?" he broke into her revery.

"You're too inquisitive. But we had known each other so long. He was part of my world . . ."

Part of my world—

The words hung in the air, separating them.

"I understand. He was a good scout. I played football against his team one year. I remember him."

"What year?" Judy asked. When he named it, she was silent. Craig had been a junior at Harvard that term. And she had seen the game, and after it had gone with somone else to a fraternity tea where Craig had joined her presently. He had proposed that day. He had done it after house parties, and during house parties; at the beach in the summer; at the club, at Lake Placid, and in the warm blue waters of Miami. In fact, her life these last few years had been protected by those words: "Judy, when are you going to marry me?"

But Craig could turn away, almost overnight. Love was thin and fragile. It never lasted. She hated the boy at her side because he wasn't Craig.

"Why are you bothering about me?" she asked him, merely to talk.

* * *

He slowed down the car, stopped, took out a wallet. From it he extracted a picture. It was Judy's face, caught on a newspaper page, that smiled back at her, creases in the sheet.

"I cut it out two or three years ago. I liked the tilt of your nose. Sort of carried it as a talisman. Then you came along in the flesh."

This boy could be persistent. He could be thrillingly masterful, too, she preceived. Suddenly she was afraid. She didn't want him to have her picture. Almost mechanically she ripped the paper in two. Then she stared aghast at the harm she had done.

"All right, Miss Judy Rogers," he was saying. "But you'll have to pay for the damage." Then he put his arms around her and pressed his mouth against her lips.

GROSVENOR TO OPEN SATURDAY

Dancing Academy Ready For 34th Consecutive Season.

The Grosvenor Dancing academy, 68-75 South Walnut street, will open Saturday night for its 34th consecutive season.

The Grosvenor building, redecorated during the summer months, is comparatively new but the dancing school is the continuation of the old Schuler Dance school, organized 34 years ago by the late Louis Schuler and now operated by his wife.

The new classes in ballroom dancing start Tuesday night. Tommy Van's orchestra will play for the Tuesday evening parties; Denny Correll's orchestra on Friday evenings and Sprang's on Saturday nights. Harry Schuler, dancing instructor, recently returned from Cleveland where he acquired some new ballroom steps which will be demonstrated in the near future.

ADVERTISE IN THE NEWS-JOURNAL

See America First . . . Last . . . and Always

Yes, see America for what it really is —better than a promised land.

To our forefathers it was just a plain land of promise with no trimmings. The merciless frontier drove hard bargains...demanded privations and daring in exchange for day-to-day existence. But they were thankful and confident.

Today vast oceans still guard our freedom. We have the Earth's greatest storehouse of natural resources. Comforts and conveniences abound. Best of all, we see every promise of a future more generous still. For America? Yes! But especially for all those with the spirit of America's pioneers.

1¢ Operates an ELECTRIC Mixer . . . 1⅔ HOURS*

Mixing cakes, bread and other foods by hand is a hard job. An electric mixer will do it easily, without any work or effort on your part, in one-quarter of the time. No homemaker would say that that one cent spent to relieve her of this arm-tiring work would not be well spent. Yet mixing cakes . . . economically . . . tirelessly . . . perfectly . . . is only one of the dozens of jobs that electricity does around the home . . . ECONOMICALLY. It protects the food, washes the clothes, sweeps the rugs, toasts the bread, protects the sight through better light, and performs a lot of other jobs besides. Yet with all the work electricity does, it takes the smallest amount out of your family pocketbook of all the items on your family budget—less than two per cent of the average family's annual budget. So use it freely . . . because ELECTRICITY IS CHEAP.

*At the average domestic rate paid by our customers—Many of our customers operate their electric mixers for a longer period for one cent, because through greater use of their electric service their rate per kilowatt-hour is less.

WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1938.

America could not have been built on a philosophy of dependence on government for the necessities of life.

In a peninsular way, Czechoslovakia appears on the map as a narrow neck of land extending dangerously into Germany.

It pays now and then to stop arguing about public affairs and conduct a little private inquiry into what young people you know are thinking about.

'Step Forward With Mansfield.'

MANSFIELD as a city of opportunity in a land of unlimited opportunities was envisioned in the inspirational talk given at last night's membership meeting of the Chamber of Commerce by DeLoss Walker, nationally known magazine editor who has won the title of "evangelist of common sense."

Dynamic in style and convincing in argument, Mr. Walker arrayed facts and figures to show the vast potentialities of present-day America if the latent power of its working forces are thrown into a united effort to translate natural resources into products required to supply the needs of 130,000,000 people.

It was made clear, however, that national progress and prosperity is dependent on determined efforts of individuals and communities, and on the creation of real wealth, rather than on paternalistic policies of government or anything that can be done FOR people instead of BY them.

This meeting, the first of a series of membership get-togethers, marked the "Step Forward With Mansfield" campaign of the Chamber of Commerce, which will include enlisting additional members in that organization.

Last night's meeting, with its display of interest and enthusiasm, evidenced the value of such gatherings, not alone for those who attend but also in the extent to which the doctrine of confidence and determination can thus be spread throughout the entire community.

Much has been said, through a number of years, of the importance of Mansfield sustaining an active and aggressive Chamber of Commerce and of the constructive work that has been done by this organization in the interests of Mansfield, not alone in bringing new industries to the city but also in taking leadership or giving co-operation in all progressive community movements.

In order that the Chamber of Commerce may be of greatest possible benefit to the city it is essential that there be a large and interested membership, not alone for the financial support thus assured but also that the working force within the organization may be sufficient to perform the tasks and develop the leadership needed to carry Mansfield forward to even greater accomplishments in the future.

The Chamber of Commerce needs the spirit and morale of many members, each dedicated to a high resolve to make this a better city in which to live, work, own a home and rear a family.

And so the Chamber of Commerce again extends an invitation to join its ranks and "Step Forward With Mansfield."

Considering Medical Insurance.

THERE is much talk about socialized medicine and hospital insurance and of Uncle Sam taking over the ancient duties of Hippocrates. There is approval of half-understood ideas and bitterness against equally misunderstood plans, and the general hubbub that always seems to befog the air when any issue becomes controversial. A few clear points emerge.

One is that there are too many people needing medical care who are not getting it. And along with that there are too many underpaid physicians and nurses. Here the old problem of distribution enters in. Getting the patient to the doctor in time to do some good, without mortgaging the future beyond hope, is the problem here to be solved.

Another point is that where hospital insurance has been put in force by private insurance companies that have done a careful job with their actuarial research, the results have been good. Group insurance of this kind is growing in favor.

A third is that Uncle Sam may not be the best person to handle the problems involved.

A fourth is that the individual relation between doctor and patient must not be prevented. It has been a useful relation for hundreds of years.

And the last point is that no ordinary citizen knows much about this yet, but he is going to have to decide some pretty important questions about it before long, and wisdom lies on the side of finding out as much as he can.

Marion Resumes Community Fund.

WEARIED by frequency of separate campaigns for funds to support welfare and character-building agencies, the neighboring city of Marion has decided to return to the Community Fund method of supporting those necessary agencies.

It appears that Marion abandoned the Community Chest plan eight years ago, as a result of depression difficulties, but found the time and effort required for separate annual campaigns for each agency placed too great a burden on workers and was less satisfactory to donors.

While there are some objectors to the Community Fund plan, fair consideration from all angles leads to the conclusion that no better method has yet been devised to give essential financial support to a number of agencies that must function in every community.

U. S. Leads In Life Insurance.

WHEN it comes to achieving "self-earned social security," the American people leave the rest of the world at the post.

The figures show, for example, that there is about three times as much life insurance in force in this country as in the United Kingdom; about thirty times as much as in Japan, and about sixty times as much as in Sweden.

These figures are important, not only because they show what United States citizens have done to guard against the exigencies of the future, but because of the influence of life insurance on the nation as a whole. Life insurance is a great stabilizing force—and a force that makes for progress and prosperity in the long run.

WASHINGTON—It doesn't really matter much to us but a general European war would mess up the Washington social business.

With a couple of common-law wars already in progress a lady who wants to get along has to keep her mind on her place cards. What, then, would be the case if a half dozen nations were having it out toe to toe?

It is fairly easy to avoid seating Ambassador Chengting T. Wang of China next to Mrs. Saito, or Ambassador Saito of Japan next to something pretty from the Russian embassy. But if you multiply the difficulties by adding a half dozen European nations, all the coal in Pennsylvania could not thaw out the official chill.

Pity the Hemstitchers.

WE WENT up to the White House to see about these things, because the White House each year has the first go at the diplomatic corps, with a reception about Christmas time. We got an inside tip that if a really good-sized war came off the diplomatic dinner and reception likely would be cancelled. If that happened, it would start such a flood of party cancellations that flocks of fancy dress shops would be sent to the showers.

Yet all these reports of icy greetings between belligerent diplomats should be taken with a dash of sherbet. Naturally Ambassador Fernando de los Rios of Spain isn't sending any choice bottles of sparkling Madeira around to a German embassy, nor does Saito invite Wang out to split a bottle of sake on a cool evening. But these two oriental diplomats accidentally met face to face at a White House party and exchanged seasonable greetings while their brothers were blasting blazes out of each other along the Yangtze. Diplomatic blood doesn't run very hot.

Democracy Captures Castle.

DEMOCRACY note: A turreted society castle out on Sixteenth street, once the haven of the high, has lately been split up into penny-ante housekeeping apartments. Guv-ment stenographers wait for the bus at the entrance to a driveway that once wouldn't admit an automobile less than a half block long unless it carried a gilt coat of arms. In olden days callers in top hats drove up the palm-bordered driveway to call for the lady fair. Now the lads make a down payment on a clatter-car, drive up to the doorway and honk.

Political democracy has been ascendant for five years and more, but the main reception hall of the White House is still strictly Republican and will remain so for several years. The portraits now hanging there are of Presidents Harding and Coolidge. The last congress appropriated money for a portrait of Hoover and when finished it will replace Harding, who will be sent to obscurity along with Jefferson and Taft. Not until President Roosevelt finishes his term, if custom is followed, will his picture be hung up. Then Coolidge will be sent to the rear, leaving Hoover and Roosevelt staring at each other benignly across the hallway.

Democracy Note No. 2—During the morning hours of each day the Roosevelts must do their entertaining upstairs in the White House as by practice tourists have right of way until about 1 p. m. Then the visiting tourists are shut out and Mrs. Roosevelt has callers for tea and the like.

Only rarely does she interrupt the stream of tourists to make use of the famed main floor (blue room, green room, etc.) before lunch.

"FLAMING YOUTH"!

The Human Side of the News

—By EDWIN C. HILL

THE state of New York puts advertisements of its recreational and scenic splendors on its bank checks, with beautiful colored pictures and the slogan "The State That Has Everything." About 2,500,000 persons will receive these checks each year.

For some reason or other—I don't propose to mount any barricades, or anything like that—this rubs me the wrong way. It does seem that now is the time when the remaining free governments of the world should make a devout religion of minding their own business. There is austere dignity and power in reserve in the government which limits itself to its few simple prerogatives—public order, national defense, just administration of the law. There is a loss of dignity and a warning of danger when it branches out in bally-hoo of any kind whatsoever.

In itself, this state check advertising probably isn't worth making a fuss about. There is no hint of a state bureaucracy touting on its checks a loyal, as against a disloyal, political and recreational area. So far it is a symptom rather than a menace. But we find its most authentic modern precedent in the early days of Fascist Italy. One of the first things they did was to emblazon their postage stamps with their state slogans, symbols and laudations of their new model government. And from then on, there wasn't a spot of wall space, a barn door, a newspaper or a sidewalk in Italy that wasn't a billboard for "the state that had everything."

* * *

ONE might say that this advertising on state checks is a bit of humanizing of the state and hence all to the good, but any human relationship implies a two-way conversation, and the fact is that you just can't talk back to a state. A friend of mine learned that. It happened this way:

Alarmed over the plight of ordinary citizens in other countries, my friend pondered the fact that, with all our stiff taxes, we've got a lot to be thankful for, with the liberties we still have, and when he was sending a check for his income tax, his patriotism and gratitude moved him to write a letter about as follows:

Dear Government: You're soaking me plenty, but I'm not kicking. I'm still free and footloose to take a sock at you at the next election if I want to, and I haven't got a commissar herding me around with a gun. I still think we're sitting pretty over here, compared with the rest of the world, and I'm willing to pay my share—even if it hurts, which it does. So here's a little surprise for you. I am paying my income tax cheerfully and happily."

What happened afterward is a sad story. Some bureau underling sniffed at this letter and held it up to the light and concluded that there must be something hidden, subversive or evasive in a letter which said an income tax was being paid cheerfully. He put the letter through channels and there was a general agreement that a man who would write such a letter must have something to hide—that he was holding out on a big income. They gave my friend the works. From then on government sleuths were lurking in dark corridors and roosting in his apple tree. His tax accounting was as wide open as a barn door. He had nothing to hide and suffered merely annoyance, aside from writer's cramp filling out innumerable blanks and reports. He told me that cured him of trying to get clubby with a government.

* * *

OUR federal government is up to its ears in advertising and publicity. Its Washington army of press agents is mounting almost daily. Its weekly publicity output deluging the country is measured in tons. Automatically, a new department, commission or bureau is equipped with a publicity staff.

Just how much explanation, enlightenment or apology is necessary with the increasing complexities of modern government deserves more spacious and informed consideration than can be given here. Personally, I am concerned with what appears to be the obvious fact that the use of government money, brains, ink or white paper for anything other than their legal, traditional and institutional uses is out of bounds for a state or federal government.

It is a far cry from innocently touting Niagara Falls of Coney Island on a state check, to a whoop for this or that politician on a WPA check—but, somehow, one thing leads to another in these fast-stepping times.

Seven Billion Dollar Gambling Bill

According to a recent estimate, Americans each year spend seven billion dollars on games of chance. This is almost as much as the total annual expenditures of the national government. Even if doubting statisticians were to divide it by two, the estimate still would represent a staggering sum of money.

But the estimate is not to be divided. Seven billion dollars can be accepted as a fair approximation of America's yearly gambling bill, a bill amounting to more than one-tenth of the entire national income. This is made up of the bets laid on horses, of the money passed across gambling tables, of the pennies, nickels, dimes and quarters aggregately lavished on such things as the furtive "numbers" racket, the back-room crap game, the candy store slot machine, and the popular church bingo. tI is what millions of Americans spend in an almost instinctive urge to make something out of nothing.

The moral and social meanings of such large-scale gambling constitute a fit subject of study for theologians and sociologists. Entirely apart from these, its economic meanings constitute a fit subject of study for economists. Seven billion dollars is a sum of money so large that it hardly can be comprehended. For the ordinary individual at least, it is almost as abstract as certain phases of astro-physics. Yet it is real enough when applied speculatively to real conditions.

Let us suppose, for instance, that the money Americans usually spend on gambling could somehow be pooled together and spent on other things. Such a pooling could cover public relief costs and leave enough over to balance the federal budget besides. Similarly, if the seven billion dollars could all at once be invested in American business, unemployment and hard times virtually would be eliminated.—The Pathfinder.

Compliment To Judge Montgomery

Up in the fifth district court of appeals, Judge Charles W. Montgomery, Newark, was slated to have no opposition for a new term which it was deemed he had earned by hard work and most painstaking attention to his duties. Judge Montgomery is a Republican in politics and once was state chairman, but partisanship was laid aside when he stepped on the bench. So the Democrats took stock of the situation and presented no rival candidate. But recently on nearly the last day an opposition candidate was brought out in Canton and the version of the affair brought here was that it was a radical labor group which was far behind the scenes.

Those who have checked over the region assert that it is not a serious pretension and that good Democrats and equally good Republicans will get together at the proper time and for the moment forget other arguments while they are joining in according to Judge Montgomery a majority that will gratify him, his wife, and an ever-widening circle of friends and admirers. Judge Montgomery was an appointee of former Governor Myers Y. Cooper and a selection of which the former chieftain still is proud.

Why Is a Jitterbug?

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

WON'T I "please write something about those vicious modern dances and those vulgar modern girls"?

Will I? Won't I! TRY 'N' STOP ME!

Only, take it from me, it won't be like you think. So don't say I didn't warn you. And don't cry if I hurt. Which I shall certainly try my darndest to do.

First, a brief word as to SWING. The briefer the better, sez I. Yes, I know—some of the Mystic Mumblers attribute much merit to the late Bix Beiderbecke's umpa-yah. But to my uncouth jungle ear, it's just musical hari-kari. And sounds like a Gastric Ulcer plus a Dose of Hives doing a fling while crossing a Hog-wallow with the Stew burning. But so does Grand Opera. And I'd prefer "Swanee River" to either of 'em. So, s'far as I'm concerned, the youngsters can not only have their Swing but also keep it—as far away as possible.

But when it comes to this Jitterbug proposition, my nonchalance vanishes immediately—if not sooner. And when I witness a nice, sweet, normal kid turning flip-flops with one foot locked firmly in the chandelier and the other draped around the Boy Friend's Adam's apple—meanwhilst she discourses on "gut-buckets" . . . "agony-pipes" . . . and "jives" . . . my feelings become acute, if not downright epileptic.

From which you might gather that I do not admire Jitterbug cavorting—and you'd gather right. It does not surprise me—for reasons which I will presently divulge. Nor does it shock me—cruel as this blow must be to many a complacent sprig who undoubtedly feels that he has plumbed the depths of hell in his "killer-diller" orgy. Hate to be a meanie, baby—but I've seen real sin. And this is just a setting-up exercise.

No, it doesn't horrify, but it DOES bore me. And it DOES sicken me. And it DOES sadden me, as I watch the charm and eager witchery of youth, tricked and betrayed into the ugliest game of Grunt and Grin, Sweat and Squat that ever masqueraded as rash and gay adventure!

For that's what it's all about . . . that's the come-on which lures these capering infants to the twinkling lights . . . and drives them frantic with Swing's teasing leer—

THEY THINK THEY'RE BEING BIG AND AWFUL BAD!

THEY'RE SURE THEY'RE DOING WILD AND WICKED THINGS!

THEY FEEL THEY'RE TASTING THE FORBIDDEN CUP . . .

AND PLAYING LEAP-FROG ON THE SEVEN HELLS!

POOR, CHEATED LAMBS!

Trading their young hunger for adventure, their young dreams of romance, for the bellow and bleat of some rowdy spot that they think is reserved for The Brave!

Poor little young things, tricked and betrayed . . . And you want me to scold them for their audacity and to brand them for their immodesty? THAT I WILL NOT! But I will blame those who are responsible . . . and I will tell you who they are!

And all of us who strip our aging flesh . . . and foul our withering minds . . . and break our country's laws . . . in an effort to be "young" and "naughty" and "audacious" . . . we are to blame!

We are the ones who have turned God's sweet and starry night into a Jitterbug orgy . . . and God's fragrant, sunny day into a hangover . . .

Six Million Passes.

American railroads have been issuing free passes and tickets to persons other than employes at the rate of 6,000,000 a year. Mileage on these passes amounts to more than 5 per cent of the total passenger revenue. It would be a much larger percentage if it included the free pleasure rides of the well-paid employes of the railroads.

Dummy directors—business men placed on directorates for the sake of wooing freight patronage—are the worst pests of railroad officials in this respect. These dummy directors are given annual passes on the roads with which they are connected, but many of them insist on first-class annual passes for their families on all lines, sometimes with private cars for wedding trips.

The passenger business of many rail lines would be out of the red if full fare were collected for every passenger carried.—Dallas News.

A Farmer's Diary

The Sportsman.

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

I AM no sportsman, in the usual sense. One summer I went to northern Michigan with a friend who was fond of hunting. He had with him a huge shotgun and a trusty rifle, while I went armed with a notebook and a pair of old binoculars.

Many times along the way, my companion would recount to me of deer and bear he had killed among the wilds like those we were passing through; of how in late summer, he saw thousands of geese and ducks along the rims of these lakes, and then he would reach for his old gun, and hold it caressingly. How he could gloat over his kill of lovely, innocent deer, or with delight spread panic among flocks of peaceful waterfowl, was more than I could understand. Yet he is a kind friend, an interesting companion, and I admire his proficiency with his gun, even while I would shudder to use one.

One late afternoon, walking along a slope of a secluded lake, we saw a large bird wing its way across, and with a piercing cry, alight in a thicket. Through my glasses, I saw that the lower feathers were white, while those of the upper wing were mottled darkly.

Without a word, we started for the spot. I scanned the tree tops carefully, and by mere accident, caught sight of a white speck framed by two pine branches. Stealthily we moved closer, until we saw the wary fishhawk looking intently at a widening ripple on the lake.

My friend took aim and fired, just as the mighty bird had taken flight. The shot severed the rear part of the hawk, and it fell, unguided, to the ground. We hurried to the spot, but so well it blended with the forest floor, that we could not find it, until its hooked beak, opened wide in anger and pain, caught my companion's boot. In terror, we both stepped back. For one short moment the bird had conquered us.

As we stood in silence, looking, the ruffled feathers slowly began to drop, and that fierce, antagonistic head fell slowly to the ground. Like a criminal, I walked rapidly from the scene, wishing to forget the stains that would not wash away.

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—Carl Erbe leaves shortly on one of the few remaining trips of interest which haven't been exhausted by tourists and travelers. This is the "inland passage" from New York to Florida, and he sets out Oct. 15 with two companions in a 60-foot auxiliary sailing yacht.

The trip south will require about three weeks, and on it they will explore little-known bays and coves, threading their way through a maze of small islands so little peopled that electricity is non-existent and the natives, a rural folk who live chiefly by fishing and trapping, still use kerosene lamps.

Erbe's departure this year is a little earlier than usual. He goes south in leisurely fashion, but once there his work will be cut out for him, because he handles Jack Dempsey's Miami restaurant as well as the Patio and Colony clubs.

* * *

THIS means here that the Riviera, Ben Marden's place on the Palisades, is closed and deserted now save for a ground crew and workmen who are putting in new equipment. The entire crew, from waiters and bartenders to chefs, and even Marden's private barber, are on their way south to open the Florida clubs. It's an annual custom with Marden to take his staffs south. Half the year they work in an atmosphere of waving palms and soft sea breezes; the remaining months they are stationed in New York.

Meanwhile, Erbe and two companions are putting that yacht in shipshape condition. If you walk into his Madison avenue office today you'll find him poring over maps, making a careful check of the inland passage. Outside of pack-train trips, it's the one remaining thriller left to travelers in this country. The trip is a long one, and not without its perils. Most of the travel must be done in daytime, which means they'll tie up at quaint ports all the way down the coast. Night cruising is too dangerous . . . too many hidden reefs and shallows waiting to trap unwary pilots.

* * *

THE route they'll take reads like a Rand-McNally map salesman talking Choctaw. . . . They'll go "outside" around Sandy Hook and into Cape May, and from there the trail leads through the Delaware river, the Delaware and Chesapeake canals and on to Norfolk. At the Virginia port they go "inside" again through the Albemarle river and through Currituck Sound, the Allegheny river and Albemarle sound.

From the sound they follow the Pungo river canal and the Neus river, leaving that stream eventually for Vogue sound, after which they come to Indian river. They follow the Indian all the way to Miami.

It'll be quite a trip. They'll make it in leisurely fashion. No hurry, of course. Long days of lazing in the sun, when there isn't work to be done, salt air and plenty of good wholesome grub.

It sounds like a swell jaunt. They asked me if I wanted to go along, but how can you spend three weeks on a boat tracing the inland passage and write a column about New York?

CHAPTER 5

Craig, not suspicious of the thoughts that were steeped so deeply behind the low words she spoke, answered:

"I hope some day someone will change your mind for you, Judy. Is there anything I can do now? Please let us drop by."

Let—us—drop—by. With one little word Craig closed the door that stood open between them, even now. Closed it and locked it for all time.

"No, Craig, I want to make a dazzling impression on your wife, and I'm sunk under my burden tonight. Next month when you come back."

"The first night we're home, Judy. Is it a date?"

"It is."

"It's a date I won't keep," she told the telephone. "That's over."

It was starting to rain. The water came with a monotonous beat against the roof and slanted upon the windows. She closed them, and rang for a maid.

"The trunks, Marie. I might start to pack now."

"But, Miss Judy, I'll attend to that for you."

"I know you will, Marie. You're a darling. But I'd like to see a trunk. Just to have it around to touch makes me feel active. I can't realize I'm awake."

The maid hesitated. She had served the family a long time.

"If it's about Mr. Craig, Miss Judy, don't fret. He loved you first. He'll come back. I know it."

Judy's eyes were almost angry as she answered. "Oh, no, Marie. He mustn't I don't want warmed-over love. I always said marriage didn't last, love was a myth, nice for light operetta, and I thought I believed it. Now it happened that way—I was right—and I don't know why I'm so surprised. But it's all right, Marie. You won't mention it to anyone?"

"No, Miss Judy. But you wait. Love may get sidetracked for a while, but when it's love, it finds its way back."

Judy smiled. "Maybe, Marie, but somebody has to be hurt. And I hate hurts."

* * *

She bound back her brown curls with a gold ribbon, slipped into lounging pajamas of the same bright shade, and mules that matched. She would sort some old programs and souvenirs for saving. Then she would read herself to sleep. The book she wanted was in the library. No need to trouble Marie again. She would get it. In the wide hallway, outside the library door, she stopped.

A tall young man, with rough, red hair and amused gray eyes, was standing there, watching her approach.

* * *

"I HOPED I would see you," said Ronald Birrell, as Judy paused near the library door, which the attorney had just closed behind him. "I think that was why I came, instead of waiting until morning to give your father the papers I brought."

"Why did you want to see me?" she asked, aware of the gleaming gold of her lounging pajamas and mules. "I ran away at noon . . ."

"Maybe that was why. I like a good fight. Are you busy now?"

"Well—hardly!" She glanced at her attire and laughed.

"Then will you take a spin up the river or around the park? I have a car downstairs."

"If you'll give me five minutes to dress."

"Good, I'll wait in the car."

"No, wait in the drawing room, or here in the den. I gather you don't want to go back to the library."

He shook his head. "I've said good night once."

Thus, 10 minutes later, wearing a sheer wine-colored woolen frock and a warm gray jacket and a beret whose style had cost very much, and whose material practically nothing, Judy slipped into the long roadster.

"I got it second-hand. I've always wanted a car. When I was a youngster, running barefooted in the hills, I used to get a glimpse of one going along the roads now and then, and I made up my mind if I ever had money . . ." He stopped and laughed. "Skip it, please."

"But I want to hear."

"Maybe some other time." The car was passing Central park where the trees waved together, their wet leaves cool and distant in the fog. Suddenly a boat horn pierced the silence. Judy started. She almost had forgotten. Craig was going out on that boat . . . going away. Oh, what right had she to be here in a car with a strange man while Craig sailed out of port with a girl she never had seen? If she could turn back the hands of the clock, tear away all the hours between now and last Thursday night . . .

"I'm sorry. I was thinking. I wish that time could retreat."

"How far back would you have it go?"

"To last Thursday night at half-past 10."

"Why then?"

"I made a mistake."

* * *

The boat horn came again, louder. It must be turning its sound on in full force as the ship swung out of its berth into the river.

Ronald Birrell's words were studied when he spoke. "I'm mighty sorry about this Craig Denby's marriage, if it mattered to you. I can't believe it did."

"Why not?" Judy asked.

"I can't think any man would choose another girl if there were the remotest chance that you were interested."

"He didn't think there was. I had been saying no for such a long time, you see."

Ronald Birrell nodded gravely. "People do that. The contrariness of human nature. But maybe you were wiser than you thought."

"Why?"

"You hadn't met me yet." His grin removed all egotism from the words.

Judy smiled, too. "And now that I have?"

"You are running off to Europe to play with the counts and the dukes."

She didn't answer. She wouldn't let anyone know that she was staying in town, hunting a job. Maybe some day, when she was successful, she would drop into the legal offices and tell Ronald.

"Playing is one way to pass time," she murmured.

"I'd hate it." He stepped on the gas and the speedometer flew across the 50 mark, to 55, 60 and 65. "I want to accomplish something."

"I used to. My father put his foot down."

"But it isn't too late! How old are you? Twenty-one? That's infancy. I'm 24, nearly 25."

"That's young to have come so far," Judy reminded him. "Don't you know you have one of the choice legal berths in this city?"

"I do." He said it so humbly she looked at him in surprise. All the gay arrogance and sureness were gone. "That's why I want to make good so badly."

They rode along the park. They turned at Ninety-sixth street, and swung across to the river. Its broad bosom was quiet, except where the raindrops dotted it. Here and there a river barge swung a green lantern. And Ronald began to talk.

* * *

He mentioned a log cabin, scrupulously clean and barren, and a mother who once had taught a term of school, married, had one child and died.

"So my father married again," the voice went on. "A girl who never got beyond the fourth grade. And I started out for myself, when I was about 12."

"Where did you live?"

"Here and there, on that farm and this. Then I came to a college, with a prep school, and the president took me in, let me fix the furnace and care for the lawn and go to school. I stayed there until I finished high school and a year of college."

"But Princeton?" prompted Judy "How did you manage it?"

"Working, saving money, one thing and another. Life's fun, Judy Rogers. Dare it to come on. Smile and meet it. It can't lick you unless you want it to."

* * *

Judy sensed that he was talking, not so much to relieve her mind from her worries, as to make her understand his background, though he would have sworn it was the other reason. They were worlds apart—Park avenue and the mountains of the south where people lived in one-room cabins too often.

Judy had visited in the long rambling, beautiful homes of the southern cities, and shared their luxury and wealth, and now and then someone had suggested a trip into the backwoods. She never had entered one of the far cabins—only the nicely arranged ones by the road. Yet here was a boy who came from one of them, who wanted her to understand. Here was a boy who might some day be great in the legal world.

"What did you see in Denby?" he broke into her revery.

"You're too inquisitive. But we had known each other so long. He was part of my world . . ."

Part of my world—

The words hung in the air, separating them.

"I understand. He was a good scout. I played football against his team one year. I remember him."

"What year?" Judy asked. When he named it, she was silent. Craig had been a junior at Harvard that term. And she had seen the game, and after it had gone with somone else to a fraternity tea where Craig had joined her presently. He had proposed that day. He had done it after house parties, and during house parties; at the beach in the summer; at the club; at Lake Placid, and in the warm blue waters of Miami. In fact, her life these last few years had been protected by those words: "Judy, when are you going to marry me?"

But Craig could turn away, almost overnight. Love was thin and fragile. It never lasted. She hated the boy at her side because he wasn't Craig.

"Why are you bothering about me?" she asked him, merely to talk.

* * *

He slowed down the car, stopped, took out a wallet. From it he extracted a picture. It was Judy's face, caught on a newspaper page, that smiled back at her, creases in the sheet.

"I cut it out two or three years ago. I liked the tilt of your nose. Sort of carried it as a talisman. Then you came along in the flesh."

This boy could be persistent. He could be thrillingly masterful, too, she preceived. Suddenly she was afraid. She didn't want him to have her picture. Almost mechanically she ripped the paper in two. Then she stared aghast at the harm she had done.

"All right, Miss Judy Rogers," he was saying. "But you'll have to pay for the damage." Then he put his arms around her and pressed his mouth against her lips.

See America First . . . Last . . . and Always

Yes, see America for what it really is—better than a promised land.

To our forefathers it was just a plain land of promise with no trimmings. The merciless frontier drove hard bargains...demanded privations and daring in exchange for day-to-day existence. But they were thankful and confident.

Today vast oceans still guard our freedom. We have the Earth's greatest storehouse of natural resources. Comforts and conveniences abound. Best of all, we see every promise of a future more generous still. For America? Yes! But especially for all those with the spirit of America's pioneers.

Operates an ELECTRIC Mixer

. . . 1⅔ HOURS*

Mixing cakes, bread and other foods by hand is a hard job. An electric mixer will do it easily, without any work or effort on your part, in one-quarter of the time. No homemaker would say that that one cent spent to relieve her of this arm-tiring work would not be well spent. Yet mixing cakes . . . economically . . . tirelessly . . . perfectly . . . is only one of the dozens of jobs that electricity does around the home . . . ECONOMICALLY. It protects the food, washes the clothes, sweeps the rugs, toasts the bread, protects the sight through better light, and performs a lot of other jobs besides. Yet with all the work electricity does, it takes the smallest amount out of your family pocketbook of all the items on your family budget—less than two per cent of the average family's annual budget. So use it freely . . . because ELECTRICITY IS CHEAP.

NAVAL RECORDS REVEAL MANILA SET 'DATE LINE'

Governor's Action Halted Pacific Time Confusion, Reports Reveal.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — The Philippines played an important part in bringing about an order in the reckoning of time among nations, reports of the Navy Hydrographic office here reveal.

At the same time, the office disclosed when European nations began establishing colonies in the Pacific. The English, Dutch and French sailed from the east, while the Spanish came from the west.

As a result, the time of the Spanish colonies was a day different from that of colonies of the other nations. Thus, the Spanish colony of Luzon, although in practically the same longitude as the Dutch colony of Celebes, was a day ahead of Celebes.

Governor Sets Time.

To end the confusion, the governor-general of the Philippines in 1844 ordered that Tuesday, Dec. 31, should be reckoned as Wednesday, Jan. 1, 1845. This brought the date into accord with the countries east of the Cape of Good Hope.

Alaska adopted American time when acquired by the United States in October, 1867, and on July 4, 1892, Samoa adopted the same time for the entire Samoan group.

In 1884 the International Meridian conference was called in Washington, D. C., at which time the meridian passing through Greenwich, England, was established as the prime meridian. Thus, the 180th meridian became the "international" date line. However, it was necessary to make slight deviations inasmuch as the line passed through certain land areas.

The navy explained, however, that no international line has been formally adopted by the various nations. On hydrographic office charts the 180th meridian is designated simply as "Date Line."

TRACES PLANE

Screen Device Used as Means to Watch Pilot's Progress.

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—Airline officials here have been testing a new method for locating airplanes in flight—a frosted glass screen with a tiny green speck moving continuously across it to represent the plane in flight.

The screen was developed by Bell Telephone Laboratories for the Western Electric company and will be used in connection with the Civil Aeronautics Authority's beacon system. The board is said to follow precisely the flight of an oncoming plane. By return radio telephone airport officials can guide the pilot to the field.

As a pilot talks through his radio, the green light moves with the plane's position on the circular screen of a cathode ray tube. Compass markings on the screen's edge enable the airport dispatcher to give the pilot his exact bearings even though visibility may be obliterated by fog or rain.

PAPER BOTTLES?

Research Finds Way to Make Paper Impervious to Liquids.

MIAMI, Fla. — (INS) — Development of a competitive industry to glass and tin is forecast here by the discovery of a chemical solution for making paper impervious to liquids. Harry S. Pickering, after years of research, now is negotiating with pulp manufacturers on a proposal to erect a plant in Miami for the making of paper containers for soft drinks, motor oil and other liquid products. Tests show such things as oil, kerosene and turpentine can be kept successfully in the paper containers.

War Clouds Threaten Czech Capital

A general view of Prague, capital city of Czechoslovakia, which, threatened by war clouds, has ordered lights dimmed at night as a precaution against air raids. Military preparedness steps are being taken because of Chancellor Adolf Hitler's threat to take the Sudeten sections of the country by force if his demands are not met by Saturday.

WISH THAT WAR WON'T COME, EXPRESSED BY MRS. ROOSEVELT

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—"I wish there might never be a war for any reason."

Thus Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt added her voice to that of her husband's, the president, in this nation's plea for peace in Europe.

The first lady made the assertion at a press conference—a conference loaded with many questions on the European crisis which Mrs. Roosevelt either answered or parried with the skill of a diplomat, as she chose.

She told reporters she got a good many letters from women of the nation asking what they could do to prevent war. She frankly admitted she knew of no magic formula, and said if there were one she wished most heartily that it would present itself.

She did, however, recommend a book that those interested in actively campaigning for the preservation of democracy should read. Its title: "The Coming Victory of Democracy." Its author: Thomas Mann—one of Germany's most notable exiles.

Declaring there is "no safety anywhere in modern warfare," Mrs. Roosevelt expressed the fervent hope that the current conversations between Germany on one side, and Britain, France and Czechoslovakia on the other, would continue and avert war.

Every person in the land should "take pains," she said, to discover for themselves the true meaning of democracy and what it stands for. She urged citizens to become active in various civic and national organizations that concern themselves with government, otherwise, she remarked, what good could such organizations be?

Grotto Joins In Reception For 'Miss America'

A patrol of 32 members from Baku Grotto will go to Marion Thursday night to take part in a "welcome home" reception arranged by the city for Miss Marilyn Meseke who was "Miss America of 1938" at Atlantic City recently.

Grotto delegations from throughout the state will participate in the reception. Miss Meseke was selected "Miss Ohio" at a state beauty contest in Cleveland sponsored by the Grotto and also was sponsored in the national contest at Atlantic City by the Grotto.

She won the right to appear in the state event at a district beauty contest at Seccaium park early in the summer where she was selected "Miss Marion." This contest was co-sponsored by Baku Grotto and the Marion Grotto.

Heading the Mansfield delegation will be Ralph Hughes, monarch, A. L. Croak, chief justice, Howard Schuck, master of ceremonies, Frank May, venerable prophet, Arthur Hughes, past state president and Robert Nichols, patrol captain.

HALTS CROWING

Roosters Won't When Heads Hit Top of Coop.

PUEBLO, Colo.— (INS — Pueblo police urged local poultry growers to follow the suggestion offered by Laura M. Smith of Canon City, Colo., for making possible a morning sleep in the vicinity of a chicken ranch. "We rebuilt the hen roosts and placed them near the ceiling that when one would raise his head to crow he would bump his head on the ceiling and change his mind," she explained. "So they never crowed until they were on the ground."
